High school students see life at Liberty's College for a Weekend

By Denise Floyd

"The purpose of College for a Weekend is to give perspective students the opportunity to see LBC on a first-hand basis," Paul Clark, coordinator of the College for a Weekend program, said recently.

Between 250 and 300 of these students are expected to participate during Oct. 18-20, in the first such weekend this year.

Although many students have already pre-registered, Clark expects some walk-ons.

They are coming in from every state," Lesa Sumner, dorm supervisor, said. "They're coming by plane, bus, you name it."

One of the main events scheduled for the weekend is the Miss Liberty Pageant on Friday, Oct. 19, which will take place in the Multi-Purpose Center at 7:30 p.m.

"Every year, we intentionally schedule the pageant during College for a Weekend. It's sort of traditional," Bev Buffington, coordinator of student activities, commented.

Friday the 19th has been declared Spirit Day, and Weekenders have the opportunity to visit the classes of their choice, followed by various late-night activities such as late skate, late bowl and Scaremare.

The visitors are scheduled to meet with the Rev. Jerry Falwell at 10 a.m., Saturday in FA 120 for a question and answer session.

In addition, the students have an opportunity to see the film, "The Empire Strikes Back," at 7 and 10 p.m. in FA 120.

Finally, on Sunday, College for a Weekend will attend the 8:15 a.m. church service at Thomas Road Baptist Church. They will remain for the 11 a.m. service for recognition on the "Old Time Gospel Hour."

Sumner also explained that although no foreign students are expected, some will be flying in from as far away as California.

Many of the visiting students have friends or relatives at LBC and will be spending three nights with them. Sumner's job is to place these students into the requested rooms.

On Thursday, Oct. 18, students can pre-register from 3-8 p.m. in FA 122. There will be a President's Reception at 8:30 p.m. for visiting parents and students.

Seniors vie for crown

By Jennifer Steele

The seventh annual Miss Liberty Pageant, featuring 24 senior women, will be held Oct. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Multi-Purpose

Center.

Pageant contestants include Bonnie Chubb, Mary Columbus, Paula Coons, Lisa Copeland, Stephanie Cratch, Pamela Delashmit, Amber Eigenhuis and Penny Ervin.

Alicia Farris, Jana Fuqua, Kelly Haverkate, Jane Hibbard, Denise Honeycutt, Lisa Landrey, Christy Largent and Leslie Painter are also contestants.

Carla Paist, Diane Rapp, Robin Sprague, Tammy Tabor, Channa Titus, Jane Willis, Nancy Zeeh and Charlene Zupan complete the list of contestants.

Kimberly Anne Boyce, a contemporary gospel singer and recording artist, will host the event. Boyce was the 1983-1984 Miss Florida and finished as one of the 10 semi-finalists in the 1983 Miss America Pageant.

Miss Liberty is chosen on the basis of Christian testimony, personality, college involvement, academic ability, ambition and appearance.

"The pageant is a way of saying thanks for all they have contributed to the school," remarked Bev Buffington.

Before the pageant a panel of judges will interview the 24 women, cutting the number to 10 semi-finalists. During the pageant five finalists will be chosen. Students attending will then vote and select the new Miss Liberty.

The panel of judges includes Macel Falwell, wife of LBC Chancellor Jerry Falwell; Louanne Guillermin, wife of LBC President Pierre Guillermin; and Linda Hogan, wife of LBC Chairman of the Board Charlie Hogan.

Other judges are Del Rey Loven, associate professor of art; Jane McHaney, assistant dean of women; Jeff Mazanec, LBC student; Jeff Meyer, head basketball coach; and Julie Nelson, LBC student.

Completing the list of judges are Marilyn Nutter, assistant professor of speech; Dr. William Paul, Jr., vice president for administrative and financial affairs; and Sheila Schumacher Suder, Miss Liberty 1982.

Laurie Bartram McCauley, the 1983 Miss Liberty, will crown the new Miss Liberty.

The 1984 Miss Liberty will attend the annual Lynchburg Christmas parade, speak at local high schools and represent LBC at local fund raising events.

Kimberly Boyce, Miss Florida 1983-84 and top 10 finalist in the 1983 Miss America Pageant, will host the 1984 Miss Liberty Pageant.

Scaremare participants become 'scared to life' through outreach

By Jane Willis

Thomas Road Youth Ministries have one up on the nightmare: Scaremare. Their "House of Death," an old school building at 2300 Carroll Ave. turned haunted house, opens tomorrow at dusk.

A 20-25 minute tour through 15 rooms will thrill and chill Halloween enthusiasts with eerie music, strobe lights and lots of

White Glove

Inspection approaches

By Greg Bagley

White Glove Inspection, LBC's version of spring cleaning, is slated for Oct. 27.

Dorm supervisors and various deans will carry out the room inspection.

"The purpose of White Glove is to help students' attitudes by cleaning things up," said Dorm Supervisor Lesa Sumner. "Things tend to get cluttered up and need to be reorganized."

"White Glove is not intended to be a burden to the students," said Sumner. "We realize the students have enough pressure academically and spiritually."

"Each inspector is instructed to try to work with the students. If a good effort has been made, we try not to penalize the room."

Rooms are judged on a 0-20 point scale. Each student will receive a list of the areas to be judged. Failure to clean these areas appropriately will result in an assessment of points.

The penalties for failing White Glove vary from a warning slip to a 10-day campus depending on the room score. If the violation is not corrected within 24 hours, the student will be referred to the dean's office.

It will continue for three consecutive weekends beginning Oct. 18-20 and ending Nov. 1-3. More than 10,000 Lynchburg residents are expected to attend.

Scaremare is designed to be more than another haunted house. Bob Miller, a youth pastor at TRBC, said evangelism is the primary purpose of Scaremare. Last year more than 500 people came to know Christ.

"The house pictures what death is," he said. "We show that there is an alternative, another way out."

Every participant is exposed to a short presentation of the gospel after touring the house. Youth pastors from Thomas Road and pastoral majors from Liberty Baptist College act as counselors.

Another purpose of Scaremare is to involve young people in community service. More than 350 students from the church, the college and the community put long hours into Scaremare.

Members of Lynchburg's private sector have also volunteered their help. An engineer from Babcock and Wilcox, some real estate people, fire marshalls and policemen will be involved.

Preparation for the 1984 Scaremare, now in its 12th year, started about three months ago. Though thousands of dollars are required, the operation is financially self-supporting.

The Junior Diabetes Foundation sells refreshments each year outside the house for the poor souls who cannot brave Scaremare on an empty stomach. All proceeds go to the Foundation.

Admission is $3.50. Information on group rates is available through the church.

Decency group stands against nation's porn

By Steve Leer

The National Federation for Decency (NFD) is mobilizing a massive nationwide picket, Saturday, Oct. 27, in recognition of Pornography Awareness Week, Oct. 28-Nov. 4.

The picketing will target convenience, grocery and drug stores as well as adult bookstores that sell pornographic magazines.

According to the October issue of the NFD Journal, the week will begin with Picket Saturday between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. The NFD is also asking members and other concerned citizens to write one pornographic magazine advertiser and voice their disapproval.

Sunday, Oct. 28, will be Decency Sunday. The NFD is urging pastors to preach on decency and to challenge their congregations to get involved in the fight for morality.

Targeted for the greatest picketing effort is the 7-Eleven convenience store chain, the single largest seller of pornographic materials. The NFD hopes to protest at more than 1,000 7-Elevens across the country.

This is not the first time 7-Eleven has come under the attack of the NFD for selling pornography. In August the NFD picketed at more than 500 7-Eleven stores and regional headquarters in approximately 200 cities. At that time Doug Reed, 7-Eleven spokesman at company headquarters in Dallas, told the Shreveport Times, Shreveport, La., that his office had received spotty reports of protesting in a few areas of the country, but nothing substantial.

Fred Davis, 7-Eleven regional manager for Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri, was even more specific concerning the effect of the protest on 7-Eleven policy. "We put it in the category of not being a big deal," he said. "There will be no change whatsoever."

The NFD is supplying "Picket Packets" for groups that wish to participate in Picket Saturday.

Packets or further information on Pornography Awareness Week can be obtained by writing National Federation for Decency, P.O. Box 1398, Tupelo, Miss. 38801, or by calling (601) 844-5036.

Political organization forms campus chapter

Approximately 40 people attended the Oct. 3 organizational meeting of the LBC chapter of Students for America, a newly formed conservative student political group.

Rolph Reed, national director of Students for America, addressed students on the history and philosophy of the organization.

Reed said Students for America was formed in March 1984, to support conservative leaders, such as Reagan, after Gary Hart had won several of the Democratic primaries in the North and was leading in several of the Southern primary polls.

"We were looking at the possibility of facing an attractive, campus-popular candidate such as Gary Hart rather than an insignificant, boring candidate such as Walter Mondale," he said.

More than that, though, Reed said the organization wants to place Christians in high offices.

"The Reagan-Bush people's objectives end Nov. 4, but ours are just beginning. Their job is to elect a candidate; ours is to promote Judeo-Christian ethics," Reed said.

"We are going to work on the primaries for 1988 in order to get a mainline conservative and, hopefully, a Christian in office.

"The 1980's are going to be for conservatives what the 1960's were for liberals. We're not going to be a vocal minority, but we're going to take over and run the show," he added.

Reed said that Students for America was the fastest growing student organization in the country with more than 4,000 members on more than 45 campuses across the nation.

"I'm not satisfied with choosing the lesser of two evils anymore," Reed said. "We must provide an alternative to liberal and moderate candidates."

Wendy's founder gives talk on free enterprise in chapel

By John Evans

Dave Thomas, billionaire businessman and founder of Wendy's and Sister's Chicken and Biscuits International, shared his personal history as well as his perspective on the American and world economy during a recent visit to LBC.

Wendy's International Inc., the third largest hamburger chain in the world, began on a shoestring in 1969 with one restaurant in Columbus, Ohio, and now boasts 2,700 stores worldwide. Sales have grown from $300,000 in 1970 to more than $1.8 billion in 1983.

Wendy's, which celebrates its 15th birthday Nov. 15, 1984, is the first hamburger chain to exceed $1 billion in sales in its first 10 years of operation.

Calmly optimistic about the present trends of America's economy, he said, "I think we Americans are a lot better off than we were four years ago when we had double-digit inflation and interest rates of 18 to 21 percent. However, the future of America's economy depends on the presidential and congressional elections on Nov. 6."

When questioned about the secrets to his marketing strategy, Thomas replied, "The only strategy I know is to market quality in both products and services. Be honest with the customer and only give him the best."

His enterprise now covers 13 other countries, but Thomas also commented, "The United States is the most fantastic country in the world, and plays a vital leadership role in the international economy.

"Many countries in Europe, like France, have found that they cannot afford the price of beef because of the scarcity of productive land resources. Therefore, our imported hamburgers have a marketing edge. Also, Europeans are now trying to become 'Americanized' and want to live the fast food way."

According to Thomas, major obstacles in taking American products overseas are the complexities of the land-leasing systems and the costly factors of production.

Thomas, who subscribes to the Judeo-Christian tradition, is a man who would rather be judged by his living than by his speaking.

Interior decorating

Pro tells how

By Martin Fisher

An interior design specialist will reveal the secrets of his success during a visit to LBC sponsored by the home economics department, 2 p.m., Oct. 19, in FA 144.

Georg Andersen, president of Cromwell Interior Design Inc. and member of the American Society of Interior Decorators (ASID), has worked on interior and architectural designing projects for numerous hotels, restaurants, banks and hospitals.

Andersen is the recipient of the 1981 Hexter National "Designer of the Year" award and co-author of "Interior Decorating: A Reflection of the Creator's Design," a full-color hardback published by Bethany House.

"The presentation will have an inspirational as well as a practical benefit because Georg Andersen is a fine Christian as well as an expert in his field," Dr. Treva Babcock, home economics department head, said.

Newlyweds and students with religious, business or art related majors are invited to attend the event.

For example, business students might be interested in how Andersen founded and developed his own firm, Georg Andersen Associates Inc.

"A specialist of interior design must have a mastery of aesthetic principles, (tasteful, well-proportioned beauty)," art instructor Del Ray Loven commented when questioned on the subject. "My students may benefit from learning about the inroads of his profession and particular experiences he has had."

Students 'Loven' every minute

By Latisa Snead

For three consecutive years the LBC student body has voted Professor Del Rey Loven as its favorite teacher. As head of the art department, Loven gives the students a different perspective of art and its place in the Christian world.

Professor Del Rey Loven gives students a different perspective of art and Christianity by utilizing unique techniques.—Photo by Melinda Hoffmann

Q How did you become interested in art?

A Art was a pastime I found rewarding as a child. I was an introvert; it was something I did by myself. My grade school teachers saw that I had some abilities and encouraged me.

Q Where did you go to college?

A I went to the Minneapolis College of Art and Design for a bachelor of fine arts degree which I earned in 1974. I earned a masters degree in fine arts at the Maryland Institute College of Art.

Q Have you always wanted to be an art teacher, or would you rather have been a full-time artist?

A Being an art teacher was not my goal when I began my training in art. It wasn't until after I became a Christian that I decided to continue my education so that I could teach at the college level. God dealt with me and led me in the direction of teaching. Since coming to Liberty I have found great satisfaction in teaching that I didn't find before as a studio artist.

Q What do you think makes you so popular with the student body?

A It's a mystery to me. I don't really like to think about popularity much because it's a fleeting thing. I try to approach the students on a level of being equal rather than condescending from the position of a professor. I think I understand the difficulties that students are going through, and I tend to side with them. I see things from their point of view rather than from an outside point of view.

Q Were you popular in high school and college?

A No, not in high school; I was a wimp. In college I was not a Christian. I was an outstanding student who received several awards. I took my work seriously, and I was really vocal in classroom discussions to the point where other students were afraid of me. I approached art at that time with the same kind of dogmatic seriousness I have about my own religious convictions today. On that level I was truly obnoxious and arrogant in college.

Q What kind of activities were you involved in in college?

A I was quite poor in college. I supported myself because I moved away from home when I was 18. I mainly painted day and night and worked on my studies. I played the guitar for a while, and I designed and constructed furniture. I didn't try to market it because I just wanted to learn and see what it would look like. I could have decided to go in the direction of applied art and designing furniture, but I felt painting was a much more creative activity in which there was much more room for originality.

Q What do you think makes you different from the other teachers at

LBC?

A I don't know. I hold great respect for my colleagues, and I have no illusions about being the best teacher on campus. We have a great faculty, and I'm proud to be a part of it. I try to keep in touch with the culture of my own time. Even though I don't agree with everything I see or necessarily approve of it, keeping informed enables me to better understand and relate to my students. Since I don't have a family here, I have a feeling about the students. They are like a family to me even though I can't get to know everyone personally. I am aware that the students have done a great deal for me. I haven't forgotten that.

Q Why have you stayed at LBC instead of becoming a full-time artist?

A I have been here six years, and I plan to stay for the next 20 years. I think this school is a great place to be. It's growing and getting better in terms of academics, atmosphere and faculty. I like working here because I respect Dr. Falwell and what he is doing. There is no one else I would rather be working for. It is a difficult decision for an artist to decide to put most of his time and energy in his students rather than in art. I have other artist colleagues who criticize me for this. People also criticize me for working for Dr. Falwell, but I think it's the very best investment of my talents. Ultimately, the students are the reason why I stay.

Q How do you relate art to the Christian life?

A To me there is an unavoidable integration between art and the truly Christian life. I don't see the question being much different for a Christian than for a typical American. The Christian has the advantage of seeing the creative arts from the viewpoint of having been made in the image of a creative God.

Q Do you have any hobbies?

A I like portrait photography and poetry. I belong to the Virginia Poetry Society and participate in poetry meetings. I am also interested in sports cars. I occasionally attend races.

Q Are you presently working on an art project?

A Yes. I am working on drawings for some paintings which I am going to begin in the next couple of months. I may be putting several pieces in the Fine Arts Building.

Q What are your future plans?

A I have a long term professional goal which is to make a significant contribution to the history of painting. This is a 50-year project, and I have another 40 years to go. Marketing and exhibiting more paintings are definitely in my schedule. I plan to stay at LBC and see the art program become an art major.

Q What advice would you give a student who is graduating?

A The advice I would give would be Phillipians 1:6: the work that Christ has begun in you, He will finish. There may be times when you will fail to live up to the Christian life and all that it is supposed to be. But really blowing it is when you give up on yourself. My advice is never give up on yourself. God is going to finish the work He has started in you. It's hard not to give up on yourself when there are other people who will want to put you down; just never, never give up.

By John Peters

There he was, frantically waving his arms in the air and yelling as he ran up and down in front of the fans, leading the crowd into an emotional frenzy that would carry to the players on the field.

Some of you remember the scene I've just described. For those of you who don't or for those of you who weren't even there, let me fill you in.

The man running up the sideline like a madman was head football coach Morgan Hout, and the event was the Oct. 6 LBC-Mars Hill football game.

The reason for Coach Hout's antics was that his players were in need of an emotional lift.

"Hey, that's pretty cool" were my first thoughts. "We've got a coach who likes to get the fans in the game." The Mars Hill offense scored, but the fans did, at least momentarily, get "in the game."

After the score the fans fell back into their mid-afternoon slumber. Then I realized how sad the sight of Coach Hout running down the sideline actually was.

It was great that Hout cared enough to attempt to get the crowd involved, but there is never, I repeat, never, an excuse for a college football crowd to be so dead to merit what Coach Hout did.

When I go to watch the Flames, I go with every intention of "yelling my lungs out." Imagine my surprise when some friends and I stood to cheer and were met by cries of "Down in front!" These were followed by showers of ice, cups and other particles of trash.

This behavior is about as helpful to our team as a termite colony would have been to Noah.

I hear it all the time: "If only we had a winning team, then we would have more fan support." Well, to coin a phrase from one of the old Wednesday night overflow services at TRBC, HOGWASH!

Talk to the players, they'll tell you. Fans can and do make a difference. Why does Clemson always win at home? Because of the fans. Why have the Washington Redskins never lost a playoff game at RFK Stadium? Because of the fans. Why do the Flames have a 1-2 record at home? Because of the fans.

Or should I say, lack of fans.

Intersection prompts correction, comment

The following letter from a local Lynchburg resident relays an important message to Liberty drivers.

Dear Sir:

I wish to inform you about the grave danger at the intersection of the Liberty Baptist College entrance and Candler's Mountain Rd.

I live on Candler's Mountain and travel through this intersection two or more times daily. My wife also goes by more frequently than myself; our neighbors do the same thing.

The sad truth is that some of the people coming out of LBC are too eager to get out. They pull out in front of traffic traveling Candler's Mountain Rd., nearly causing accidents. I myself have witnessed cars coming out, many times without even stopping.

Now I am sure that most of your people are safe drivers, but I assure you that a few are causing an extreme hazard. I am hoping that something can be done.

Again I would like to say that I hope you don't consider me an old grouch; I simply wish, for the sake of all of us, that there is never any kind of accident at the intersection because someone was in a hurry to get out.

That local resident deserves a thank you for concern and foresight.

In driver's education there were several important rules that driving instructors always shared. Most important of all was that the red octagon sign meant stop.

Now it is easy to just roll-and-go, but stop means stop.

The Bible teaches to "render unto Caesar that which is Caesar's," and that includes stop signs.

Government establishes law for the people's good, and the Liberty intersection stop sign is just one of those good things that the government has done for us.

Those who have had to travel down Candler's Mountain Rd. can sympathize. Cars pulling into the intersection without completely stopping cause white knuckles to tighten around steering wheels.

Trying to get a car to slow down on that hill proves to be difficult enough, but coming to a complete stop in an emergency is nearly impossible.

Those coming up the hill also present a problem, especially for those waiting to turn onto Candler's Mountain Rd. from the school entrance.

Car manufacturers install a terrific little gadget on car steering columns called turn signals. They come in handy at intersections. If the Lynchburg letter writer above ever had to come off Liberty Mountain, he would ask a lot of people to please use these handy gizmos.

Hopefully a little foresight will prevent sorrowful afterthought.

Intersection—Roll-and-go doesn't make it.

Gossip is for the birds

By Janice Bellairt

Everybody knows a parrot.

A parrot named "Baby" helped police identify a robber. Baby simply repeated what he heard (the name of one of the robbers) during a burglary in the parrot's home.

Like that robber, Liberty is also plagued by little birds with big ears and mouths. These fine feathered 'friends' simply repeat everything they hear.

I went on a date one Saturday. On Sunday everybody in my dorm knew who I went out with and where we went. Ninety people knew more about my date than I did.

"Your date last night was so cute; he has the dreamiest blue eyes." Were they blue? I couldn't tell; it was too dark during the movie.

Sunday afternoon a total stranger asked me if I enjoyed the movie. "How did you know I went there?" I asked.

"Oh, someone was talking about you at lunch."

People are like parrots; they repeat everything they hear, but they do not consider what damage they may do.

I was interested in a man, so a "friend" mentioned my interest. The man hasn't spoken to me yet this semester.

Also, when the news flies around the campus, it often becomes distorted. Go out on one date this weekend; go to church together on Sunday morning, and all of a sudden wedding bells are going off.

"Who was that guy I've seen you with so often? Are you two serious?"

It's no wonder some don't date much at LBC. It's a federal case the next morning.

What about those times you forget to turn in your homework? I've had people tell me that they were praying for me because I was too busy to get my homework done. How on earth do so many people know more about me than I know?

I sat at breakfast the other day and overheard someone talking about a friend of mine. They mentioned that she was in some trouble.

I went to her immediately. She didn't know what I was talking about. Just then, the deans called and said they wanted to see her right away.

If you have friends that are birds with loose beaks, feed them crackers, not ammunition.

Absentee votes count

Conservatives and liberals canvass the country urging and pleading people to get out and vote Nov. 6.

Everyone from the Moral Majority to the National Organization for Women has spent thousands of dollars to register voters.

Those out-of-state college students who failed to register to vote for this presidential election have forfeited the right to vote for the leader they feel would best represent the nation.

These same people complain later when the president, senator, congressman or local legislator they oppose is elected.

But for those who have registered the easiest method is the absentee ballot.

A letter to the appropriate office in your home state, informing them of your plans to vote absentee, will guarantee the ballot will be sent.

In Virginia registered voters have until five days before the election to inform the local office by mail of their intention to vote absentee.

Most states have nearly the same guidelines, but it is important to write or call home to make sure of the procedure. Don't wait though, time is growing short.

When that "X" marks the box, we exercise our Christian responsibility to this government and voice our opinion in a way that makes the biggest impact.

Voting absentee insures that we still take part in this important election even though we aren't home.

7-Eleven boycott provides national stand against porn

By Phil Day

The National Federation for Decency (NFD) boycott of 7-eleven stores selling pornographic magazines will succeed only if people are involved.

NFD hopes to get the message across to the Southland Corp., owners of 7-Eleven, during Pornographic Awareness Week, Oct. 28-Nov. 4. NFD believes that most 7-Eleven customers want the smut off store shelves.

The nationwide chain is the largest seller of pornographic magazines with a majority of its 10,000 stores selling porn.

Can a boycott really get the message across, and what possibly can be accomplished? Would Southland and 7-Eleven care?

Stores could suffer heavy financial losses if every customer who is offended by porn refuses to patronize them.

But if Southland agreed to remove the magazines from their shelves because of the boycott, more positive things would happen.

Children who buy candy, baseball cards and comic books at 7-Eleven won't be exposed to the depravity that sits an arm's length away.

Southland Corp. could make more money when people see that 7-Eleven helped in the ongoing battle against pornography.

Statistics have proven that the increase in availability of porn is linked to the rise in rapes and other demented crimes; with less pornography, crime might be reduced.

The best prospect of all would be the setback given to Bob Guccione, Hugh Hefner and Larry Flynt when their smut empires crumble.

College students can get involved in the national boycott, and they can make a difference.

Writing home to parents and friends telling them to boycott 7-Eleven stores that sell porn in their neighborhoods helps. Writing the Southland Corp. can also help. Write them at:

7-Eleven
 John Thompson, Chairman
 The Southland Corporation
 2828 North Haskell
 Dallas, Texas 75204

The opposite also applies for those 7-Eleven stores or other places of business that refuse to sell porn. We must patronize them and show that we support their stand against pornography.

Be involved in the battle against pornography.

Sport Shorts: CC wins state title, Horton takes second

Horton takes second

Dr. David Horton, physical education instructor at LBC, repeated his runner-up finish in the National Capitol 36-Mile Road Race, Oct. 7, The Washington Post reported.

Last year Horton made up nearly seven minutes on the leader in the last five miles, but still finished second. The race this year held still another disappointment for the ultramarathoner.

After falling five-minutes behind early in the race, Horton took control when the leader dropped out at the 20-mile mark. The LBC instructor clutched the lead until the final quarter mile of the race where he was overtaken by Bill Lawder.

Cross Country takes title

The LBC men's cross-country team won the Virginia Division II State Championships for the fifth straight year, with four runners finishing in the top ten. Brian Olling paced the Flames with a first place finish.

The Lady Flames finished second in the meet led by Nancy Knowles who was individual state champion.

Soccer team slumps

The Flames soccer team dropped to 4-6-2 after a 1-0 overtime loss Saturday to Howard University in Washington, D.C. The loss was the Flames' fourth straight.

Both teams missed several scoring chances throughout the game. Howard won on a blasting 20-yard shot that beat LBC goalkeeper Paul Annan to the right post in the final minute of the first overtime period.

The Flames have also lost to Radford, 1-0, Mt. Saint Mary's, 3-0, and Roanoke, 2-0, in the past two weeks.

Despite the losses the Flames are still in contention for the Virginia state playoffs. They bring a 2-1 conference record into their match today against Eastern Mennonite.

Lady Flames beat Clemson

The LBC volleyball team followed wins over Clemson and North Carolina by winning the Catonsville (Md.) Invitational Saturday. The wins raised the Lady Flames record to 20-6.

The team beat Clemson and UNC in the Virginia Quad Meet after a loss to Virginia, Oct. 6. Liberty then beat Bridgewater on Thursday before winning over Christopher Newport, Rosemont, Mary Washington, Catholic and Catonsville Saturday.

Golf and Tennis added

Golf and tennis are the newest sports available at LBC this fall. The two new sports were added in an attempt to expand the athletic department.

Focus: Fred Banks

By Lisa Landrey

Flames' wide receiver Fred Banks has one goal for this season. Banks said he'd love for his father, who has never seen him play, to be able to come to a game this year.

"My mother died when I was young, and it would really be great to have him there," he remarked.

Concerning his football experience here, Banks can honestly say he appreciates playing for a Christian school. "I used to just play football," he remarked; "now my feelings out on the field are entirely different. The players here care about each other."

Banks came to LBC from Chowan Junior College in Murfreesboro, Tenn., where he was named to the all region and all district teams. He began playing for the Flames in '82 and led in receptions with a total of 29.

The 6 foot, 180-pound senior from Columbus, Ga., has been an NAIA All-District player. He missed last season after a hand injury in the first game. However, this year he's back in action with a co-player of the week award already behind him.

Majoring in physical education, Banks would like to use his skills coaching football to young children, but he does have some other goals. He expressed a desire to play his best this season for the Flames and possibly rise to the professional ranks.

Recipe lacks vitamin D

By Tim Brockway

Recipe for a successful offense: First take 130 pass completions out of 217 passes, then add a total of 1,619 yards passing plus 15 touchdowns and only five interceptions. These are the ingredients that make up the hub of the Flames football team—Phil Basso.

The statistics speak for themselves; Basso has taken over the Flames' offense and set up a dictatorship. Although the team's record is 2-4, Basso is one of several players who has had an outstanding season setting new school records.

In the Mars Hill game two weeks ago, Basso set two new school records by passing for 332 yards and six touchdowns. He then added two more touchdowns in the West Georgia game last Saturday and reset his own record by passing for 382 yards.

The Flames went into the West Georgia game fresh from a victory over Mars Hill College. In that 42-27 win, Basso did not hold the entire spotlight. Rennie Jones and Fred Banks (see Focus on page 7) both caught two touchdown passes along with Jacob Pope's 91 yards rushing, the most gained all season by a Flames back.

On the other side, Joe Seamster lead the Flames' defense with 16 tackles and an interception in the end zone to halt a Mars Hill drive.

Despite the Flames' fresh enthusiasm they were unable to hold down the West Georgia offense and suffered a 52-38 defeat.

David Harris had his best game of the year with 72 yards rushing on 16 carries. Jacob Pope gained an additional 31 yards on five carries. He also caught two passes for 23 yards.

Basso's passing attack was highlighted by Banks' record-breaking 11 catches for 145 yards and a touchdown. Kelvin Edwards added six more receptions to his record with 82 yards while Doug Smith pulled in another Flames touchdown along with his nine catches for 88 yards.

Health was a big question for Basso this season. A nagging shoulder injury has spoiled most of his college career. Before the season he was optimistic about a healthy season.

"The one thing I can't do is worry about getting hurt. A positive mental attitude has helped me tremendously in getting through the bad times; now I'm looking forward to better times," Basso said.

Not only is Basso healthy, but he's having the time of his life. His enthusiasm shows in the way he has taken a responsible role as the Flames' quarterback. He spoke about his final season with the Flames saying, "I'd like to go out on a winning note and be the best leader I can as quarterback."

"More specifically, I'd like to pass for 2,500 to 3,000 yards and no less than 15 touchdown passes. I'm also shooting for a 55 percent completion rate," he continued.

With the season half finished, Basso is well ahead of his goals for the year.

"I just work here," he said. I had just asked LBC starting guard Winfred Hogans if he'd like to see his face in the paper.

"Newspapers are for Basso (Phil) and K.E. (Kelvin Edwards) and those guys," he replied.

I informed him that they'd all been in the paper.

"Then get Mitch (Lucas). He's a senior; it's his last go round. I just work here."

"I just work here." That's a pretty good attitude and a necessary one if you want to survive as an offensive lineman. Glory seekers had better find another position. While Basso was getting his picture in every newspaper in the area, Winfred Hogans was quietly being named offensive player of the game for two successive weeks.

In spite of the fact that he is considered the top pro prospect on the team, tackle Mitch Lucas is only remembered for the chase he gave a JMU defensive back on a failed two point conversion.

The same anonymity befalls the rest of the Flames' offensive line. Everybody has heard of Basso; few people know the man who snaps the ball to him, H.O. Lyne. The crowd cheers when Edwards makes a great catch; nobody cheers when Tony Dillon and Mark Fernald keep an opponent from Basso long enough for the pass to be thrown.

And there is little hope of fame ever being theirs. A defensive lineman can always dream of the big sack. The offensive lineman's only hope is that he won't be the one who was supposed to protect the QB from the now-celebrating opponent.

So I guess 'I just work here' is a pretty good motto for an offensive lineman. And a great attitude for any Christian. If we cared more about getting the job done than getting credit, maybe more would get done.
