LU rolls out red carpet for alumni

By JANETTA CAMPBELL and ANDREW LYONS

Homecoming is a time for friends to share old memories and the LU football team make some new ones.

This year's Homecoming will be held next Friday through Sunday, Oct. 20-23.

Vice President of Enrollment Management Jay Spencer, organizer of the Homecoming celebration, said the purpose of this year's Homecoming is for alumni to come back and see the campus changes.

For this very purpose, the Visitors Center will provide a guided tour for the alumni on Friday from noon to 4:30.

Before the tour, alumni will have the chance to attend Convocation in the Vines Center. Spencer said Friday morning's Convocation has not been put together yet.

"We're still putting a lot of these pieces together," he said. "I'm trying to wait to see what kind of registration we're getting. If we're not going to have the majority of the people arriving until Friday afternoon, we're probably not going to do much in Convocation."

Spencer said the administration's objective for the weekend is to communicate to the alumni at the banquet. "The rest of the weekend will be a time for them to reacquire themselves with old friends," he said.

The alumni banquet will be held Friday evening from 7-11 at the Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza. Dr. Ed Dobson, former vice president at LU and former Pastor's Sunday School class teacher at Thomas Road Baptist Church, will speak.

"We thought we would bring someone in from the past that a lot of alumni from that time frame would remember," Spencer said.

"I told (Dobson) that he could speak on anything he wanted, and he said, 'I think I'll talk with them about what is their obligation to the university,'" Spencer said.

"He specifically said 'I see them, just like me, no longer connected to the university, but I still feel there is an obligation I have to Liberty University.'"

Also speaking at the banquet will be Chancellor Jerry Falwell and President A. Pierre Guillermin.

According to Spencer, there will be a special announcement given concerning the future of the alumni association. In addition to the quarterly magazine alumni receive, they will now receive a bimonthly newsletter entitled "Rekindling the Flame." Spencer said they will have copies of the first issue at the banquet.

"It's a candid information piece that lets them know from a university perspective what is going on here, not just what is going on with alumni," Spencer said.

Spencer said one of the purposes of the newsletter will be to present "all the things they need to know from us that they may hear rumors of and not get as factual information."

Spencer said that the Eagle Awards would be given to the alumni at the banquet. The Eagle Awards are awards given to alumni to honor distinguished accomplishments.

When asked why Homecoming would not feature a concert this year, Spencer replied it was mainly because of the time frame in which they worked.

"Jane McHaney, who was the alumni director, resigned in September, and she had gotten some things started but really did schedule to spend most of the months of August and September to really put together Homecoming," he said.

Spencer said McHaney resigned mostly to spend time with her father, who is ill.

Despite the absence of a concert, this year's Homecoming will provide several other traditional activities.

Other activities scheduled for Homecoming weekend include the annual bonfire, which will be held Friday evening at 11 at David's Place, an alumni picnic at William's Stadium Saturday at 11:30 a.m. and the Liberty versus Wofford Homecoming football game at 1:30 Saturday afternoon at Williams Stadium.

While this is only the 24th Homecoming, plans are already underway for next year's 25th Homecoming celebration, Spencer said. Next year's Homecoming is scheduled for Oct. 25-27.

Some things are hard to leave behind. I'll make sure your new home measures up.

Falwell's dream turns 25

By S. DANIEL KIDDER
Assistant Copy Editor

The vision called for a Christian educational system spanning "from pre-school to Ph.D." That vision has evolved during a period of 25 years — it is called Liberty University.

This year, Liberty University turned 25 years old, and Dr. Jerry Falwell is already looking ahead to the next 25 years.

But the future cannot be breached without a trip through the past.

Falwell, pastor of Thomas Road Baptist Church and chancellor of Liberty University, began to realize his vision in the early 1960s.

He started a Christian school at the church and called it the Lynchburg Christian Academy. Several years later, the school expanded to include high school. But, in the spring of '71, Falwell's vision was about to grow again.

Falwell began a search for the man who would help him develop the vision — and the curriculum.

He enlisted Dr. Elmer Towns, president of several Christian schools in the past. Towns, who was preaching in Canton, Ohio, decided to write the syllabus and catalog and join the school.

When Liberty began Sept. 8, 1971, as the Lynchburg Bible College, it had 154 students, and classes were held on the grounds of TRBC.

Students lived in motels and hotels in the city and in bungalows on Treasure Island, in the middle of the James River. They were bused to class on green and white Old Time Gospel Hour buses.

Towns, the only full-time professor in those days, and 14 part-time teachers began to prepare men for the full-time ministry.

The school grew over the years, and more housing was needed for the incoming students. LBC rented the Ruffner Elementary School building from the City of Lynchburg for classes and also used the old Brookville High School building.

In 1976, in honor of the 200th birthday of the United States, Lynchburg Bible College became Liberty Bible College.

Construction began on Liberty Mountain, and in four years, the first classrooms were completed.

In 1981, classes opened, and students had to track through "miracle mud" to get to class.

In 1985, DeMoss Hall was completed, as well as four dorms and a cafeteria.

Chapel was held at TRBC, and students were bused back and forth between the school and the church. Towns then proposed the erection of a large tent, like those used in revival meetings. The tent was open on the sides, and when it rained, "we had the Red Sea running through the middle of the convocation," Liberty's president, A. Pierre Guillermin, said.

In 1984, radio preacher, former circuit rider and Falwell's mentor, B.R. Lakin, was honored when the school of religion and the building housing it were named for him. Shortly after the dedication, Lakin passed away and was buried next to the Prayer Chapel.

In the late 80s, helicopters began to fly in the components of a large silver bubble.

A 10,000-seat arena was constructed to house sporting events, concerts and convocation services.

Because the building was made possible entirely by a donation from the Vine family, the Vines Center was named in his honor.

In the following years, the school added more dorms, the Reber-Thomas Dining Hall, the Hancock Athletic Center and Williams Stadium.

In the 25 years Liberty has been providing students with a Christian education, $1.1 billion has been raised. Falwell predicts that number will double in the next 20 years to take Liberty University into the next century.

Now, Liberty's future is the discussion as the Christian liberal arts college enters its 25th year.

Falwell said the future of Liberty is rosy.

According to Falwell, two new dorms will house an additional 400 students next fall, and DeMoss Hall will add second and third floors will be added to Demoss Hall in the near future.

Falwell said the school has fought for 25 years to arrive where it has.

"I knew God was in it. I knew it wouldn't be easy ... and we launched. It has been tough all the way, but I never doubted for one moment that we could become what we are today and much, much more."

Homecoming Game Preview

Flames vs. Wofford

Saturday, Oct. 21

(2-3)

Series: Tied 2-2
 Last meeting: WU 17-6, 1986
 Game Time: 1:30 p.m.
 Place: Williams Stadium

Liberty returns home after a long road trip that took them to Delaware State, Hofstra and Central Florida. At press time, the Flames were 1-1 on that trip, with the Central Florida game yet to be played. The Flames are looking to capitalize on a lesser opponent for Homecoming. Liberty should be able to move the ball rather well against the Terriers. The Terriers allow nearly 200 yards rushing per game. The LU game is one of seven away games for the Terriers.

Liberty will look to get the ball into the hands of Andrew McFadden and Courtney Freeman on the outside early. Liberty quarterback Antwan Chiles has the ability to spread the field. If the passing game isn't there for the Flames, the offensive load will fall into the capable hands of running backs J.T. Morris and Lawrence Worthington.

The key to LU's success will be the play of the offensive line. The offensive line has been banged up all season.

Linemen Trey Sartin and Jerry Scranton have been missed. Sartin is out with a leg injury, and Scranton has left the team for personal reasons.

LU is currently on a one-game Homecoming game slide. The Flames lost 22-17 last season to the Hornets of Delaware State. Overall Liberty is 13-8 on Homecoming.

Homecoming: year after year

Liberty University may be celebrating its 25th year, but the annual Homecoming festivities are entering year No. 22. The Flames have historically enjoyed coming home, winning 13 of the 21 previous games. Delaware State defeated the Flames in last year's Homecoming game 22-17. Here's how the Flames have fared on Homecoming day from day one.

Miss Liberty pageant has grown simpler

By KRIS PATTERSON
Champion Reporting

There she is, with a crown on her head and roses in her hand. In a sequined evening gown, she walks down that glorious strip of stage to wave at the audience — tears streaming down her face.

Miss Universe? Maybe.

Miss Liberty? Not a chance.

The pageant setting is long over at LU. About four years ago, the whole idea behind Miss Liberty changed. Michael Stewart, dean of Student Life, said the process that will determine who will be Miss Liberty for the 1995-96 school year will be much simpler. "We want to leave this more in the hands of the senior class," Stewart said. "We want the young lady who best represents Liberty University."

In addition to the pageant setting changing, the voting process also has been greatly simplified in the last two years. The middle of the process, viewing the top 20 qualifiers, has been eliminated. In a revised process, a list of 201 senior women with a GPA of 2.75 or higher was distributed to seniors through intracampus mail.

Seniors voted on these names, narrowing the list down to 50. The administration and faculty cut the list down further by selecting 25 girls.

Then, another list was sent out Friday with these 25 names; seniors then voted for the final five. These five will be notified and will give a brief testimony in Convocation on Oct. 20, the Friday before Homecoming. Miss Liberty will be announced at halftime of the football game.

While the changes in the pageant may seem overwhelming, change is nothing new for the Miss Liberty pageant. In 1979, the very first pageant was held, believe it or not, at Thomas Road Baptist Church.

As this activity continued through the years, it developed into a full-blown production with a professional choreographer and talent competitions with judges.

Girls were judged for talent, poise, confidence, beauty and testimony. It was the Miss America pageant without the swimsuit competition.

Then, four years ago, finances began to limit this production. Suddenly, it went from a beauty pageant to 20 girls giving their testimony.

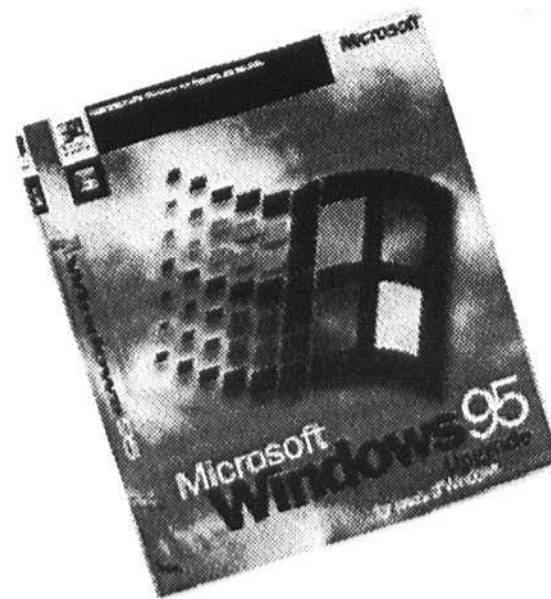

Since then, the Miss Liberty pageant has grown simpler by the year. However, one thing that hasn't changed is the quality of the girls.

"Someone always gets left out that should have been there," Stewart said. When asked about a particularly special year, Stewart replied, "Probably the year before we stopped doing all of the fancy stuff. It's the last one to look back on. Yeah, it was nice. We miss it, but is it really necessary? I don't think so."

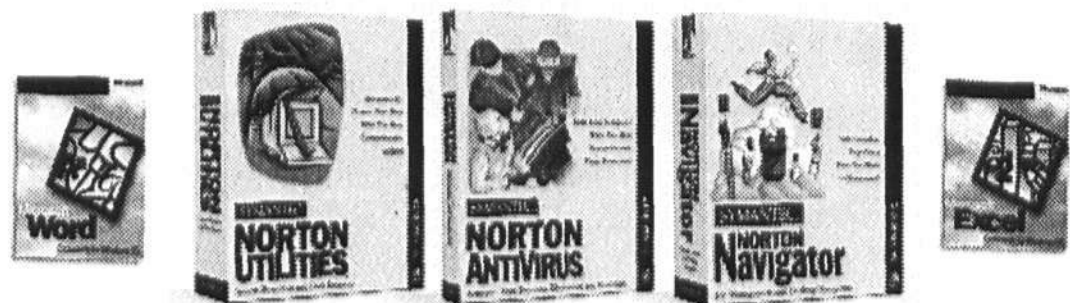

PAGEANT — After 1989, the Miss Liberty pageant became less of a beauty pageant. The pageant is now simpler, with seniors having more of a voice in electing the next Miss Liberty. file photo

Time for a change

Miss Liberty is a title that has been worn with pride by beautiful female members of the university's community for years. It is awarded to a member of the student body who has a good grade point average, good looks, an outgoing attitude and lots of school spirit.

All of these things I'm positive you, my beautiful and intelligent readers, understand.

So I ask you the reader. Why is there no Mr. Liberty?

You can't come up with a good answer, can you? Don't worry, neither could I. That is why I've decided to start my own Mr. Liberty contest.

The contest will be decided by the same rules as Miss Liberty, only garnered to those of a manly persuasion.

Since it is I who have decided to install this new Homecoming tradition on Liberty Mountain, I feel it is only fair that I should be the first recipient of this honor.

I think I qualify, and by the end of this self-serving column, I hope you will agree.

First of all, look at the above photo. I don't look a thing like a soap opera star. I don't look like I stepped out of the pages of Teen Magazine. All of this I will openly admit, but I've been told time and time again that I'm cute. Yeah, cute; in the masculine dictionary, this is almost as horrible as the phrase, "I think we should just be friends." While I have never embraced the adjective, I think it will work to my advantage on this occasion.

Secondly, I do have a good grade point average. Thank the good Lord that my GPA will be counted only up till now, because it is sure to fall after this semester's encounter with college algebra.

Thirdly, I am involved in school activities. I have been the sports editor at this address for two semesters. I also co-host a weekly sports show at C-91 (Monday nights from 6-8—please listen, please). I have participated in LU sports as well, sort of. I was a member of the marshmallow-hurling team at home football games in 1994 before my promotion to my current job.

So let's face it, folks. I have the credentials. When you cast your vote for Miss Liberty, remember that I'm the one who should be receiving the yet-to-be conceived Mr. Liberty crown.

Better yet, in protest of the fact that there is no Mr. Liberty yet, I would appreciate your write-in votes for Miss Liberty.

I'll wear that funny little tiara. That's Richard MacLone. M-A-C-L-O-N-E.

Flames get off the road

LU comes home

By RICH MACLONE
Sports Editor

Dorothy from the "Wizard of Oz" said it best.

"There's no place like home; there's no place like home."

LU Head Football Coach Sam Rutigliano agrees.

The Flames, NCAA Division I-AA independents, have suffered scheduling woes from day one. It has been most evident the last two seasons. The Flames in 1994 were forced to travel wide and far during a vital stretch of the season. The Flames traveled to Philadelphia, Pa. (Villanova), Boise, Idaho (Boise State), and Toledo (University of Toledo), Ohio. Liberty dropped all three contests.

This season, the Flames endure another tough stretch of highway. LU traveled to Dover, Del. (Delaware State), Uniondale, N.Y. (Hofstra University), and Orlando, Fla. (Central Florida). Over those six games, Liberty has gone 1-4, with the Central Florida game yet to be played.

Long trips on the road make players and coaches yearn for home for various reasons. "Things are much more complicated on the road," Rutigliano said.

A typical trip consists of an early wake-up call, a two-hour bus trip to Greensboro, N.C., then a flight to the destination. The players and coaches then check in to the hotel and have a meal. Then practice, devotional and curfew. That's Friday.

Trials of the road are enough to drive the sanest man to the edge.

"Being at home makes things go so much smoother. We have the home crowd, an easy walk or drive for the players to the stadium, and when it's all over, we don't have to travel for a day to get home," Rutigliano said.

Homecoming is truly that for Liberty. The Flames are playing their first game in front of a friendly crowd since Sept. 16. For those of you scoring at home, that is 35 days.

Flames burn it up in the pro ranks

By RICH MACLONE
Sports Editor

Every backyard quarterback has seen himself tossing a bomb down to the end zone to be hauled in for a game-winning touchdown pass.

Every high-school football player has seen himself galloping 80-plus yards for a touchdown in the Super Bowl.

These are dreams that youngsters around the United States yearn for daily. Only a few actually fulfill that dream and become professional football players. Even fewer step onto the playing fields in the National Football League.

For example a handful of Liberty Flames have found their way from Liberty Mountain to the gridiron of the NFL. Among them are Eric Green, Dwayne Carswell, and James McKnight.

Green is the most renowned former Flame playing in the professional ranks.

The big tight end was drafted in 1990 by the Pittsburgh Steelers in the first round of the NFL draft. He played for five seasons in the Steel City before being signed as a free agent in 1995 by the Miami Dolphins, and is regarded by most as one of the top five players at his position in the NFL. Green made an appearance in last season's Pro Bowl in Hawaii.

"Eric Green was one the best players to play at Liberty," LU Head Coach Sam Rutigliano said. The former Flame was named to the NCAA I-AA Associated Press second team in 1989.

McKnight and Carswell seem to go hand and hand. They both were receivers at Liberty, McKnight a wide out, Carswell a tight end. They both left Liberty in 1994 and headed for the AFC's western division.

McKnight signed with the Seattle Seahawks, Carswell with the Denver Broncos. Both have seen limited time in their first two pro seasons, but are seeing more of the playing field as the days pass.

These three are not exceptions, but seem to be trend-setters for present Flames hoping to make the jump into the NFL.

Current Flames Antwan Chiles and Tony Dews seem to have the best chance.

"I've heard scouts say that they think that (Chiles) has better stuff than (Houston Oilers first-round pick, Steve) McNair. All the tools are there," Rutigliano said.

That Was Then ...

The old pastel blue marching band uniforms are a thing of the past. Now, the Spirit of the Mountain has new uniforms to go with its new halftime field show.

Who are those impeccably coiffed men? Though President A. Pierre Guillermin and Dr. David Beck have matured over the years, two things that haven't changed are their stylish 'dos and their snazzy fashion sense.

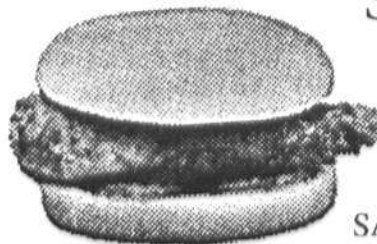

Praise God! The nightmarish lines of check-in are a part of history. Thanks to the administration's efforts to revamp the system, students breezed through the process this Fall. Also, students now have a one-stop service center for all their financial and registration needs.

Under Head Football Coach Sam Rutigliano, the Flames have been ranked in the top 20 of many NCAA Division 1-AA polls. It was former coach, Morgan Hout who started the 1-AA tradition in 1988. Liberty hosts Wofford for the Homecoming game.

Vines Center is LU's version of Disney's Epcot.

Modifications to the Miss Liberty selections process have changed the contest significantly. Several years ago, Miss Liberty contestants wore evening gowns, learned a fully choreographed program, and paraded down a runway. Now though the focus is the same, this homecoming tradition is much simpler.

Though LU students and faculty lost quite a few parking spaces, the addition of the Reber-Thomas Dining Hall was welcomed by the entire Liberty family. Since it opened in the Fall of '92, the new cafeteria has been used by thousands.
