Special Issue information:
In Fall 2010, CPE will publish a special issue, Christian Distance Education.
Special Issue Editors: Jason D. Baker, Ph.D., Regent University and Mary Lowe, Ed.D., Erskine Theological Seminary

Call for Papers: CPE is planning a special issue and inviting papers on Christian Distance Education from the ACCESS, Association of Christian Distance Education, 2009 and 2010 conferences. ACCESS members are also encouraged to submit papers on the topic of Christian Distance Education.

In the face of rapid expansion of distance education, Christian educators are challenged to provide leadership in the field of distance education. Leadership may be provided in a variety of ways. Leadership may include the application of cutting edge technology and best practices in a distance education courses to the adoption of high standard assessment of online programs to ensure accreditation. This special issue aims to showcase the research and best practices of Christian distance educators and how they are leading in the field of distance education.

Submission: All submissions should follow the format and author guidelines set forth by CPE. Authors are requested to submit manuscripts to the Special Issue Editors no later than August 1, 2010. Editors will contact authors with their decision and may direct authors to submit their manuscripts to the bepress system for further review.
