1-2019

Man's Moon Walk, God's Earth Walk

Harold Willmington
Liberty University, hwillmington@liberty.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/willmington_personal_observations
Part of the Biblical Studies Commons, Christianity Commons, and the Religious Thought, Theology and Philosophy of Religion Commons

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/willmington_personal_observations/7

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Dr. Harold Willmington's Personal Observations at Scholars Crossing. It has been accepted for inclusion in Dr. Willmington's Personal Observations of the Bible by an authorized administrator of Scholars Crossing. For more information, please contact scholarlycommunication@liberty.edu.
MAN’S MOON WALK, GOD’S EARTH WALK

In the 1960s an American astronaut wrote a book entitled Moon Walk. In it he related how he had left a pleasant, familiar, and safe place called earth and had landed on an alien, dangerous, and unfamiliar planet known as the moon. When rightly understood, Luke 2:7 is the divine account of Earth Walk, for it begins the story of how God’s Son left the beauty and safety of heaven to dwell upon an alien and sin-cursed planet, the wicked world of mankind.

To rephrase the familiar nursery rhyme:

Mary had a little Lamb, His life was pure as snow.
And everywhere the Father led, the Lamb was sure to go.
He followed Him to Calvary, one dark and dreadful day,
And there the Lamb that Mary had washed all my sins away.

And the bottom line? Well . . .

If our greatest need had been information
God would have sent us an educator.
If our greatest need had been technology
God would have sent us a scientist.
If our greatest need had been money
God would have sent us an economist.
If our greatest need had been pleasure
God would have sent us an entertainer.
But, alas, our greatest need was forgiveness and redemption
So . . . God sent us a Savior.