LU's Selah yearbook nationally recognized

December 18, 2007 | Tara Maxwell

Liberty University's Selah yearbook is among the finalists for the prestigious 2008 Crown Awards.

The national award is presented annually by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

The Crown Award is the highest possible national recognition given to college yearbook programs and means that Liberty's yearbook is rated among the Top 10 nationally.

Carrie L. Barnhouse, LU's Career Center director, is the yearbook's adviser.

All finalist publications will receive either a Silver or Gold 2008 Crown Award during CSPA's Awards Convocation in New York City, scheduled for Sunday, March 16, 2008, at the Marriot Marquis Hotel in midtown Manhattan.

A total of 1,882 newspapers, magazines and yearbooks published during the 2006-2007 academic year were eligible for judging in the 2008 Crown Awards Program.

In addition to LU's Selah, the finalists included:

Aggieland, Texas A&M University, College Station, TX;
Agromeck, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, NC;
Arbutus, Indiana University at Bloomington, Bloomington, IN;
Ibis, University of Miami, Coral Gables, FL;
Illio, University of Illinois, Champaign, IL;
Royal Purple, Kansas State University, Manhattan, KS;
Sooner/Crimson Tradition, University of Oklahoma, Norman, OK;
Talisman, Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green, KY;
The Razorback, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, AR.
