CHAPTER FIVE: THE GOLDEN AGE OF ISLAM

Study Questions

1. Sunni and Shia Ali was the fourth Caliph, the last Rashidun, and the first Imam. Why is this significant for the split between the Sunni majority and the Shiite minority? What two unjust defeats (at Najaf and Karbala), from the Shiite view, mar the leadership succession? Why is martyrdom a major part of Shiite thinking? What is Twelver Shiism? Who are the Ismailis? What is an Ayatollah? Why does ijtihad (interpretation) give Shiites more flexibility? How does the Shiite mentality differ from that of the Sunni? What did Abd al-Malik accomplish? What role was played by the Berbers in the spread of Islam? Who stopped the Muslim advance into Europe and when? What and where was Al-Andalus (where a branch of the Umayyad dynasty survived)? How was the Abbasid dynasty founded? [The Umayyads were massacred; the capital moved from Damascus and Baghdad was built to house it]. What made the caliphates of Harun al-Rashid and his son Mamun so outstanding during the Golden Age of Islam? (82-89)

2. From the Arab Renaissance to Fatimids and Turks What intellectual role was played by Arab physicians and philosophers, such as Avicenna (Ibn Sina) and Averroës (Ibn Rushd)? What were some of the Arab contributions to mathematics and astronomy? What were some possible reasons for the end of the Golden Age? Who were the Buyids? The Mamluks? The Fatimids? The Khazars? The Seljuk Turks? Who sought to control Palestine during the 130 years before the Crusades?

CHAPTER SIX: MANZIKERT, CRUSADERS, MONGOLS

Study Questions

1. Manzikert What were some of the short-run and long-run consequences of the Byzantine defeat at Manzikert (1071)? What were some of the later consequences for the Balkans? What else happened to the Byzantines in 1071?
2. The Crusades When Caliph Omar entered Jerusalem in 638, why was he warmly welcomed by Jews and Christians? What happened to the Jews and Christians of the Arabian peninsula? What are dhimmis? [They also had to pay the jizya tax for the privilege of toleration]. How and when did the Crusades originate? What were some of the motivations at work? [The practice of primogeniture in family law was a factor]. How did the Frankish knights behave? What and where was the Albigensian Crusade? What were the Crusader states? Identify the chief Christian orders of chivalry. Who was Saladin, the founder of the Ayyubid [not Abbuyid] dynasty, and what were his accomplishments? When did Crusader rule come to an end? (98-104)
3. The Crusades: Effects and Interpretations Although Catherwood is impressed by the 461 year gap between the loss of Jerusalem and its recapture, arguments based on historical precedent are always hazardous. The Scotch-Irish claim close to as many years of residence in Ireland. The Germans lived in Russia about as long until forced out after WWII. The 11C Papal Revolution sought to restore the Church back to its earlier autonomy under Gregory the Great. What makes the Fourth Crusade so memorable? What was the Latin Empire? What made the Crusades more of a sideshow even in their day? What then was the real epic struggle over the Dar-al-Islam (House of Islam)? Why do the Crusades really matter in our time? (104-08)
3. Mongols When did the Mongols reach the Middle East? Who was Prester John? William of Rubruk? Who and where were the Nestorians? When was Baghdad destroyed? What spared the Middle East? How did the Mamluks take over? Why can the political decline of the Islamic empire be traced back to this period? How was Islam itself changing, as witness the career of the Hanbali scholar, Ibn Taymiyya? What happened to the Mongol Il-Khans? What innovation by Ibn Taymiyya has caused much political mischief by likening unrighteous Muslims (apostates) to infidels belonging to the Dar-al-Harb [House of War]. What is the intellectual genealogy from Ibn Taymiyya to al-Qaeda? (108-16)

CHAPTER SEVEN: THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE: THE TRUE STORY OF AN ISLAMIC SUPERPOWER

Study Questions

- Imperial Expansion in Europe and Asia How did the Ottoman Empire originate? How did the Ottomans expand their territory? What were the short-term and long-term consequences of the Battle of Kosovo (1389) and the Battle of Nicopolis (1396)? How were the Ottoman Empire nearly toppled, as well as Egypt's Mamluk regime? Why were they spared? Sultan Murad's successor Bayezid I [not II] was captured by Timur (Tamerlane) and probably committed suicide, which led to a bloody succession crisis with Mehmed I gradually eliminating his brothers (1402-1413). Please note that here are errors and inconsistencies on pages 121-22. How did the Mughal Empire in India originate? How did Constantinople fall in 1453 and what were some of its consequences? Hagia Sophia, converted into a mosque, was turned into a museum in the 1930s. How did Selim expand the empire and when did he claim the caliphate? What did the Protestant Reformation owe to the Ottomans? The two sieges of Vienna (1529 and 1683) appear to have been partially conflated. The earlier siege took place in 1529 but the croissants may not have been rolled out at that time despite the story on page 124. What made the Battle of Mohacs in 1526 so important? Why did Transylvanian Protestants prefer Turkish rule? (117-24)
- Problems in East and West What was the character of the Safavid dynasty that Ismail establish over Persia? In what ways did it reflect older rivalries? What is the significance of Don John's victory at Lepanto in 1571? How did Shah Abbas change the character of the region? Who were the Grand Viziers? [They correspond somewhat to the majordomos of the Frankish kingdom and the shoguns of Japan]. Devşirme, or more commonly devshirme (not dervishme), was the Ottoman "blood tax" established by Sultan Murad I (who was killed at the Battle of Kosovo in 1389) to create a caste of dependable administrators and warriors. Christian boys (but not Jews or Armenians), primarily from the Balkans, were conscripted before adolescence, converted to military (Janissaries and other corps). The practice of "tax-farming" used by the sultanate recapitulated a common earlier Roman practice. The late Roman Empire even made some offices hereditary to ensure greater accountability and make sure that the taxes were collected (any shortfall had to be raised by the provincial officials). The second Siege of Vienna was one of the great events of the last millennium. Two months after it began, Poland's King Jan III Sobieski (elected in 1674) led his heavy cavalry (the Hussars) into battle on September 12, broke the siege, and defeated the Grand Vizier Kara Mustafa at the gates of Vienna. The Hörnchen (croissant) is the crescent-shaped roll created to celebrate the victory that saved Western civilization. After that, the empire began its long decline. What was significant about the treaties of Carlowitz (1699), Passarowitz (1718), and Küçük Kaynarca (Kuchuk Kaynarji, 1774)? The millet system of community-based law gave Russians the right to intervene on behalf of Orthodox subjects; later the French were given the right to intervene on behalf of other Christians. What is meant by the Eastern Question? The independence of Greece, Crimean War, the carving off of Ottoman territories by Britain, France, Russia, Austria, and others represent some of the actions and confrontations that grew out of it. (124-30)

3. Wahhabi Islam What is the intellectual ancestry of Wahhabism and how did it become such a powerful religious force in Arabia? How do Wahhabis regard jihād? (130-34)
4. The Nineteenth Century: Western Expansion, Ottoman Retreat Who was Mehmet Ali? By the way, at one point he massacred the Wahhabis. What was the chief threat to the Ottoman Empire in the early part of the nineteenth century? What finally doomed the Ottomans? Who were the Young Turks (CUP)? The Young Turks took control of the Empire in a 1913 coup. The war minister and chief leader, İsmail Enver (Enver Paşa or Pasha), who admired Germany, arranged the German-Turkish alliance that brought the Ottoman Empire into the First World War in October 1914, but he proved to be an ineffective commander and strategist. Later Enver collaborated with the Bolsheviks, sought to restore Ottoman territories from Russian control, pursued his pan-Turkic dreams (Turanism), and was killed in a Russian attack at Dushanbe (Tajikistan) in 1922. By contrast, Mustapha Kemal (Atatürk), who was the Turkish commander at Gallipoli, was a nationalist who later founded the new state of Turkey. (134-45)
5. The Decline of the Ottoman Empire: Orientalism and After Who is Bernard Lewis and what does he believe “went wrong” with the Middle East? How did Edward Said rebut his argument? What did Said mean by “Orientalism?” How has their dispute been drawn into the American culture wars? (145-53)
