INTRODUCTION

Outline and Study Questions

1. What is the great “crease” that divides western civilization, and why? [Other major creases include the great divide between the Catholic and Eastern Orthodox parts of Europe and the northernmost frontiers of the ancient Roman Empire]. Why is it so difficult for the average American to know and understand the outside world? Lingua franca means “free tongue,” implying a common language. Why do geography and history suffer neglect in Anglo-American higher education? (9-10)

2. What are some sources and some consequences of the typical misunderstanding between Anglo-Saxons and Continentals? Why did the seeds of American and British foreign policy (toward Mexico and others) nearly always bear evil fruit? (10-13)

3. Why did the author write this book? What does he reveal about his own character? What was so significant about 1917 (when the author was eight years of age)? (13)

PART I: EUROPE IN THE ROUND

CHAPTER 1: GEOGRAPHY

Outline and Study Questions

1. Western Peninsula of Eurasia: A diversity of peninsulas, inland seas, variegated cultures; only the Sarmatian Plain (roughly between the Vistula and Volga rivers) is a natural setting for a huge land empire.

2. Size: Fifth-largest of six continents excluding Antarctica, which is larger. It is much smaller than Russia and only slightly larger than China.

3. Disunity: Russia, Caucasus. But the growing European Union promises to be one of the big stories of the 21st century, along with the growing power of East Asia.

4. Europe’s Northernness: Calgary, Alberta is further south than London; Portland, Oregon is at the same latitude as Milan and Venice; Lynchburg is farther south than Athens, Greece, or any other European capital, but Anchorage, Alaska is further north than any.

5. Atmospheric Coloring: Darker blue in the southern latitudes.
6. Gulf Stream and the Sirocco Winds from the Sahara.

8. United States Climate: East of the Cascades and the Sierras, it is similar to East Asia (east of the Rockies, Canada is similar to Siberia).

10. Flora and Fauna: The Great Biological Exchange that began with Columbus became even more marked in the nineteenth century with the development of global markets for exotic products. Potatoes are not Irish but American, like tobacco. But citrus fruits were introduced to Florida ultimately from Asia. It would have been impossible for an Italian to enjoy "Neapolitan" ice cream before this exchange began. Similarly but earlier, cotton, coffee, and sugar cane were introduced into Europe from Arabia and other parts of Asia.

CHAPTER 2: RACES, ETHNIC UNITS, NATIONS

Outline and Study Questions

1. Race: Illustrate how differences of classes and estates often coincide with successive waves of conquerors.

3. Intelligence: Role of maternal love and contacts with adults in child development.

4. Nationality (Ethnicity): Dual allegiances and divided consciences. Prior to the French Revolution, to whom or what was allegiance owed? Why does democracy militate against national differences?

5. Nationalism: The archconservative Austrian Prince Metternich persecuted German as well as Italian nationalists (as opposed to patriots). What do nationalists typically seek to do with their ethnic rivals?

6. The Multinational State Harmonizes Very Badly with Parliamentary Democracy: What was the advantage to the traditional monarch of Christian Europe to be of mixed if not foreign ancestry? He was also regarded as pater patriae (father of his country), making him something like a founder. [Even as a young Illinois politician, Abraham Lincoln’s Lyceum Address shows that he understood that powerful leaders would seek to carve out their own place alongside that of the founding generation. This appears to be the prerogative of great presidents as well as kings]. Thought questions: Does the great diversity of this country harmonize with democracy? And does democracy harmonize with liberty? Alexis de Tocqueville raised these questions in the 1830s.

7. Sometimes Nationality Is Identified with Religion or Class: How have these differences been modified?
a. Examples: In Slovakia the nobility was almost wholly Magyar (or magyarized); in Slovenia it was German-Austrian.

8. Citizenship: Wars and treaties have changed citizenships overnight (as with the Alsatians). The typical pattern of citizenship is ius sanguinis (law of blood) rather than the ius soli (law of territoriality or soil) that is the basis of American citizenship. What was significant about the Lex Primo de Rivera?

CHAPTER 3: CLASSES AND ESTATES

Outline and Study Questions

1. Differences Between Class and Estate: The traditional estates of France were the clergy, the nobility, and the bourgeoisie, but class differences are more hazy today. [An important subplot of the movie “Chariots of Fire” depicted social expectations and class differences in very revealing ways, especially with respect to the two outsiders (neither one a member of the gentry or the established faith), but also how insignificant these distinctions are in the context of eternity].

2. Differences Between High and Low Culture Are Attributable to Human Factors

3. Europe’s Demotic (Common People) Societies: Social mobility is greater in Europe than in America [the author considers the founding generation to have been aristocratic]; ennoblement was a means of fostering mobility.

4. Aristocrats prefer a republic or a weak monarchy, but in the absence of social mobility, they are in danger of becoming a caste based on money.

5. Comparisons (26-28)
   a. American high society is more exclusive than European; social status, not money, is the driving force in American life.
   b. In Britain, an aristocrat need not be a member of the titled nobility.
   c. In Imperial Russia, princes, teachers, noblemen, and small employees formed a totally mixed society.
   d. Polish and Hungarian society were the most aristocratic; Poland and Hungary never had feudalism. Poland’s downfall was its elective monarchy (following the end of the Jagellon dynasty in 1572), which strengthened the powers of the nobility but diminished central authority (each member of the Diet held a veto).
   e. Spain and Portugal never knew serfdom; every peasant aspired to be taken for an hidalgo (a nobleman).
   f. [Like England’s Magna Carta (1215), Hungary’s Golden Bull (1222) established constitutional government; similarly, Alphonse IX, king of León, granted the Carta Magna Leonesa (1188) and later founded the University of Salamanca, a great center of learning].
   g. Constitutional government began with the resistance of the nobility against royal prerogatives; volunteers who served in the American War for Independence included many members of the European nobility, such as Tadeusz Kościuszko, Kazimierz Pulaski, the Baron von Steuben, the Comte de Rochambeau, the Marquis de Lafayette, and “Colonel Armand,” the Marquis de la Rouërie, who was a tragic victim of the French Revolution.

h. The nobility is also well-represented in radical leftism, socialism, and Communism.

6. Burgher Class: Urban aristocracy without titles.

7. Social Distances: A paternal-patriarchal attitude takes the rough edges off social differences. (28-29)
   a. France: During the French Revolution, the titles Monsieur and Madame were replaced by Citoyen (Citizen) in an effort to root out the manners and social distances of the Old Regime.
   b. Imperial Russia: Like members of the family servants called their masters by their first name and patronymic.
   c. Spain: An aristocratic egalitarianism is displayed in addressing others as Don or Doña (a Caballero is a gentleman or knight).

8. Distinct Hierarchies: Wherever European bureaucracy is apolitical and enjoys tenure it is usually characterized by an aristocratic flexibility. In Sweden, the old aristocracy was converted into a civil service, according to Roland Huntford’s The New Totalitarians.

9. Upward Mobility: European history abounds in tales of men of lowly birth who rose to exalted positions.

10. Envy: Internal politics and, up to a point, even foreign relations in Europe can be largely explained as the clever mobilization of the envy of the many against the few (envy, which is one of the seven deadly sins, is a form of mimetic desire).

CHAPTER 4: EDUCATION AND INSTRUCTION

Outline and Study Questions

1. Education (reserved to parents and private boarding schools) vs. Instruction

2. Curriculum: Elementary school, three types of “middle schools” for university-bound students (classic, semi-classic, and scientific).

3. Regimen: the eight or nine years in the intermediary school (Gymnasium or lycée) are often a daily battle for survival.

4. Universities: These are graduate schools; they are also generally located in the big cities, unlike American universities which are usually not located in the largest city or the state capital. Polytechnic schools are engineering schools with university status; France’s les écoles are super-graduate schools that prepare the intellectual and administration elites.

5. School Life: European universities are not highly subsidized and can afford few frills.

7. Academic Rankings: Universities are autonomous bodies, often with extraterritorial powers; academic legion; rector. [Traditionally, British professors were enfranchised both where they resided at school and in their home district].

8. Democratization of the University: Students revolt; intellectuals are not as uniformly leftist as they are in America.

9. Elitism vs. the Relaxation of Standards

10. Late Vocations

11. Studies and Social Life: Poverty is not a bar to university attendance; alumni associations are nonexistent; students’ associations, some of which engage in group dueling.

12. British System: Grammar schools (public) and public schools (private); in loco parentis (in the place of parents) and dress codes. (35-37)
   a. Public Schools: private boarding schools, originally established for the poor nobility and gentry; Dr. Thomas Arnold of Rugby (the headmaster in the 1857 classic Tom Brown’s School Days by Thomas Hughes); public schools were a decisive element in building the empire.

13. American System: Follows the British pattern with graduate school modeled after the German universities.

16. Prestige of the Teaching Profession: In Europe it is still largely a profession for men and is highly respected; the greatest prestige is attached to university professorships.

17. Hierarchy and Rank: Polymaths like Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Gen. Helmut von Moltke, Gabriel Marcel, Eugene Delacroix, Johann von Goethe, Pope Leo XIII, and Richard Wagner were once the glory of European capitals; the salon (the Lyceum movement in nineteenth century America sought to fill that niche).

CHAPTER 5: WOMEN IN EUROPE

Outline and Study Questions

1. Women’s Liberation Movement: Simone de Beauvoir’s The Second Sex.

2. Common Qualities of Women: Maternal instinct, intuition; le dolorisme (suffering, aching, doleful); cruelty, eagerness to please; deceitfulness; and a strong sense for details.
3. Northwest Europe and Scandinavia: A psychological entity where the position of women resembles that in the United States (where religion is marked by puritanical influences).

4. Intermediate Zone (predominantly Catholic) and Deep South (where Islamic influences are felt): Religion is strongly mother-oriented.

5. Switzerland and France: Women’s suffrage obtained only after the Second World War.

6. Whether Men Love Women in General: Friendships between men and women are most frequent in the intermediate (largely Catholic) zone; the salon can only be brought to life by a woman. (41-43)
   a. Examples of friendships and Platonic loves
   b. In the Islamic world, as well as in antiquity, any intimate nonsexual relation between the sexes is (or was) unthinkable. As a result, the danger of homoerotic and homosexual ties was always present.

7. Position of Women on the Continent: The extraordinary position of French women declined with the full flowering of the bourgeois age (likewise to some degree in America where the influence of an Abigail Adams or a Mercy Otis Warren was evident in the founding era: see Ann Douglas’s The Feminization of American Culture on the mid- to late-nineteenth century).

8. Effects of Equality

9. Middle-Class Atmosphere vs. the Higher Social Circles: Middle class women were financially indentured to their husbands; but a the higher circles, ruling queens and empresses were accepted without difficulty (although this fact astonished Muslim rulers).

10. Social Courtesies

11. Dating

12. Dances

13. Engagement: The dowry plays an important role was a means to safeguard the material security of women.

Review

CHAPTER 6: RELIGION

Outline and Study Questions

1. Christianity: Battered, ridiculed, persecuted in places, diluted, or denied, it is still a constituent element of Europe; Rousseau, Kant, and Marx could be called Christian heretics.

2. Psychological and Intellectual Elements: Missing in non-Christian civilizations are such notions as the transcendence of man, his unique personality and independent destiny, his dominion over nature, the concept of free will, and man’s responsibility for his fate on earth and in the hereafter.
3. Challenge of Islam (46)
   a. Civilization broke down throughout Europe (except in the Byzantine Empire) following the fall of the Roman Empire to the Germanic hordes. Ibn Fadlhan's account of the Vikings is merged with the Beowulf legend in Michael Crichton's Eaters of the Dead, which was made into a film called The Thirteenth Warrior. Dynasties like the Merovingians (the seventh and eighth century Frankish kings) were brutal autocracies that took many generations of Christian leavening to change.
   b. The Arabs of that same period rapidly assimilated much of the culture of antiquity and learned much from the eastern civilizations. The author attributes the later Arab decline in part to discrimination against women.

4. Survival of Christianized Greek Culture and Civilization in the Byzantine Empire: Schism with Western Christendom came to a head in 867 under Photis and was finalized in 1054. Nearly a thousand years later the Pope has been prevented by the Orthodox hierarchy from visiting Russia.

5. Manichean Tendency of Eastern Church: Body and intellect are undervalued; wisdom is prized over knowledge (as with Platonists); iconoclasm flourished (icon painting follows certain strictures); the filioque clause (that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son) of the creeds has been rejected; Eastern asceticism often goes beyond the taming of the flesh to killing it (the prevalent idea of kenosis is that Christ emptied himself of all divine powers and that the Christian life should be characterized by self-abasement, poverty, and non-resistance).

6. Antimaterialism (47-48)
   a. It has tainted a large part of Eastern Christianity and is evident in severe sexual segregation of some monasteries (cf. Islam)
   b. Bolshevism is typical of an antinomian (anti-law) reaction of a grossly materialist character.
   c. Comparison of the mentality of Eastern Church nations with that of Catholics.

7. Persistence of Psychological Patterns Associated with Religious Traditions: An atheistic Catalanian anarchist will still be a psychological Catholic.

8. Schisms: First between West and East, then within these two main communions.

9. Martin Luther and the Protestant Reformation: Luther was not a revolutionary or a forerunner of the French Revolution; instead, he revolted against Humanism and the Renaissance. (48-51)
   a. Luther's visit to Rome, 1510-11
   b. The medieval tradition has been better preserved in the Protestant world than in Roman Catholicism; survival of the Gothic style [a South American intellectual, Claudio Véliz, contrasts the “Baroque hedgehog” of Latin America with the “Gothic fox” of the United States].
   c. Once the new faith established itself, a great shift of hearts and minds took place (as in Knox’s Scotland and Calvin’s Geneva).
   d. Irish Catholicism is still medieval in character because it never experienced the Renaissance or the Baroque.
   e. Origin of the term “Protestant” (properly Evangelical).

10. Direction of the Protestant Churches (51-53)
   a. Lutheranism did not spread much outside the Teutonic orbit (Finland, Estonia, and Latvia are exceptions).
   b. John Calvin was the arch-Reformer.
c. Reformed (Calvinist) churches retained their intellectual vigor for well over two centuries but faltered in the face of the rationalism and skepticism of the Enlightenment [eighteenth-century European secular intellectual movement] to which the Catholic Church was nearly impervious because of its magisterium [its authoritative church hierarchy].

d. America has divorced itself increasingly from one John of Geneva, Calvin, only to fall into the arms of the other John of Geneva, Rousseau, partly because of the inroads of democracy.

11. Comparing the Catholic and Evangelical Minds (53-54)
a. Protestants: More progressive, have a greater civic sense, better equipped to establish an industrial civilization, place more emphasis on general education, more team spirited, emphasize good works.
b. Catholics: Strongly personalist.
c. Anarchism is more prevalent in Catholic lands.

12. Clericalism: It developed in the absence of aristocracies, as in French Canada, Ireland, Slovenia, and Slovakia, combining the functions of the first two estates; it is more apt to develop in a democratic state or where the Church is very powerful.

13. Clergy: It is an Irish, not a Catholic, custom to call ordinary priests “father;” only members of religious orders, such as monasteries, are so designated; the Reformation was a socialization of the monastery; Evangelicals are far more disciplined than Catholics.

14. Differences of Theological Anthropology (55-56)
a. For Catholics, man has not become entirely wretched through original sin; the glory of man is an indispensable part of Catholic theology and is crowned by the glory of the saints.
b. Four elements that embellish life on earth: Religion, love, art, and nature.
c. The fine arts suffered a severe setback with the Reformation.
d. Symbolism of Catholic liberty.

15. The Evangelical Nations Visibly Eclipsed the Catholic Ones in the Areas of Industry and Commerce, the Science and Military Proficiency (56-57)
a. Capitalism was born in northern Italy (contrary to Max Weber) but it took off through Calvinist influence; Puritanism favored the accumulation of wealth; abolition of Catholic holidays left more time for industry; emphasis on the work ethic.
b. Free enterprise, a game with definite rules, does not appeal to the Catholic temperament; notions of “fair play” and dispassionate sportsmanship fare badly in an atmosphere of “absolutism.”

16. Secularism: It initiated a second stage of development in the Protestant world that sparked a new dynamism that eventually sealed the Protestant ascendancy over the Catholic world.

17. Moslems: Since the publication of this book in 1979, Islam has become a rapidly growing religion in France, England, and other parts of Europe; with the end of the Stalinist state in Albania, Islam is once again openly practiced there. In Yugoslavia, the Muslims were descendants of Bogomils, Gnostics who adhered to Manichaeanism and Adoptionism. Islam is now spreading through widespread immigration from North Africa, Turkey, and the Middle East. The first new mosque in more than half a millennium was dedicated in Spain in the summer of 2003.

a. The synagogue was considered the Mother of the Church.
b. Diaspora (dispersion) expanded over most of what used to be the Roman Empire.
c. The Khazars were a large Turco-tartar tribe that converted at the beginning of the Middle Ages.
d. They developed two distinct local dialects: Yiddish (a form of German) and Ladino (a modified older form of Spanish). These two communities, the Ashkenazim (North European Jews) and the Sephardim (Spanish Jews), formed separate cultural entities with different traditions.
e. Anti-Judaism (anti-Semitism): Religious factors include a misinterpretation of the New Testament; a discussion of historical, sociological, and economic factors; exodus from Spain; conversions.
f. Medieval Ghetto: The condition of Jews worsened in the late Middle Ages; cultural, religious, and legal autonomy; enforcement of court decisions.
g. Enlightenment: Discussion of the contributions of Christians of Jewish birth; some like Henri Bergson (French philosopher of the élan vital), Franz Werfel (German novelist, author of The Song of Bernadette), and Simone Weil (French philosopher) did receive baptism.
h. Social Segregation vs. Integration
i. Nazi Persecution: Resulted from the mobilization of the German masses against their elites; Jews were becoming an aristocracy of merit (highly successful minorities have suffered persecution by the envious throughout the world and down through history – note Thomas Sowell’s series of studies on minorities).
j. Any alien minority will be profoundly critical of its environment: the author notes that this is frequently true of Christian thinkers.
k. Leftism: Jewish individualism does not harmonize well with collectivism; much of the migration to Israel after the Second World War came from the East; “anti-Semitism” was always rife in socialist parties; Karl Marx’s attitudes toward Jews.
l. Geographical Distribution of Jews Today: Poland, Russia, Germany, Austria, Spain.

20. Church-State Relations: Cooperation is the norm; a radical separation exists only in France and Portugal (but does not go as far as does the United States); even so, these countries have diplomatic ties with the Vatican.

21. Established Churches: The head of state is the head of the Church in the case of Protestant churches; this gives rise to numerous anomalies, particularly in the area of education.

22. Religious Outlook (64-65)
a. The top is primarily to blame for the upheaval in the Catholic Church, resulting in a new kind of anticlericalism.
b. The crisis is more apparent in countries where the Catholic Church, as a minority, exercised greater discipline
c. Present-day period of prosperous practical materialism will come to an end, with a return to spiritual values anticipated.

CHAPTER 7: POLITICAL STRUCTURES

Outline and Study Questions

1. Regimen Mixtum (mixed regime): Standard form of European government draws upon the influence of Plato, Aristotle, and Aquinas.

2. Democracy: One of the oldest and most primitive forms of government; representative democracy is a form of oligarchy, with a time limit.

3. Representation: Parliamentary institutions; Britain’s Magna Carta (1215) and Hungary’s Golden Bull (1222) were the fountainheads of the only two aristocratic regimes without a written constitution in Europe; U. S. Senate is the most powerful “aristocratic” body.

4. Power of the Aristocracy and the Patricians (67)
   a. During the Middle Ages royal power was severely restricted; the king was under law; a period of royal absolutism followed the Reformation, but mediating structures (what Tocqueville called the corps intermédiaires) continued to act as buffers between the crown and the people (principle of reciprocity) through the church, local institutions (such as the cortes, parlements, and Landtage), city councils and guilds, etc. The Spanish grandees showed a spirit of resistance against royal orders.
   b. On the whole, aristocratic periods combined political freedom with a certain amount of anarchy; royalty in alliance with the bourgeoisie was eager to maintain order and discipline.
   c. These two elements fostered the rise of bureaucracy.

5. Human Side of the Monarchs: Spain’s Philip II

6. Monarch as Parens Patriae (Father of the Country): He is the “private property” of his subjects; the nation is conceived as one big family [cf. Don Corleone].

7. Professional Training and Regimen of the Monarch: Franz Joseph; modern monarchs were habitually the protector of the people and unpopular minorities; when the Austrian throne was vacated after the First World War, the fate of German Jews was sealed.

8. Monarchy as an International Institution (69-70)
   a. Intermarriage among the Catholic royal families, on the one hand, and the Anglican, Reformed, Lutheran, and Eastern Orthodox ones, on the other [Britain’s Prince Philip is Greek as is Sofia, the queen of Spain; Czar Nicholas II, Kaiser Wilhelm II, and King George V were all grandsons of Queen Victoria].
   b. Dynasties: International and interracial
   c. Cabinet wars were fought with non-doctrinated, very expensive armies of mercenary soldiers; not until the French Revolution were huge conscript armies dragooned into service and taught to hate the enemy, leading to total war.
   d. Conscription was gradually adopted by monarchies throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth century [as late as 1913, the U.S. attorney general argued that conscription could not constitutionally be used to raise an army to send into foreign combat]. Conscription was reintroduced in America in 1917 despite this.

9. Intellectual and Moral Superiority of Monarchs: They compare favorably with many of the leaders who followed them in the transition to republicanism.
10. Early Republics: Italian city-states, Hanseatic cities, imperial cities of the Holy Roman Empire, Republic of Novgorod, United Provinces of the Netherlands, the Polish republic-commonwealth; the Allies insisted on republican governments, considered weak because of factional quarrels, for their former enemies in 1918-1919.

11. Constitutional Monarchies: By 1860 mixed governments (constitutional monarchies) were in power practically everywhere in Europe (including imperial France) with parliaments taking the place of the estates of old; in 1910 there were only three republics worth noting (France, Switzerland, and Portugal). (71-72)
   a. Prisons: in the old patriarchal order, jail and punishment often had a “familistic” character; punishment of Gavrilo Princeps.

12. Postwar Republics and Monarchies: Only Greece and Albania switched from republic to monarchy (the Greek military overthrew to monarch in the 1960s); there are only eight notable monarchies today: Spain, United Kingdom, Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark, Norway, Sweden (Monaco and Liechtenstein are microstates), but the current (2003) prime minister of Bulgaria, Simeon Borisov Sakskoburgotski (Simeon, son of Boris Saxe-Coburg), is its former king, Simeon II (1943-46). (72-73)
   a. Constitutional monarchies (e.g., Spain) vs. parliamentary monarchies (The British House of Lords has now lost its veto and the number of hereditary peers has been greatly reduced).
   b. Psychological monarchies

13. Majority of Republics Came into Being as a Legacy of Defeat
   a. Downfall of a monarchy frequently has an erotic aspect: The case of Leopold III of Belgium, who married a Fleming following the death of Queen Astrid.

14. Democratic Republics (73-74)
   a. The earliest parliaments were forums for discussion; only at a later stage did they become legislative bodies.
   b. Harold Laski believed a two-party system and a common public philosophy are necessary for a successful representative government.
   c. Most governments on the Continent are coalitions of several parties.

15. Ubiquity of Democracies: The nineteenth-century historian François Guizot noted that the idea of democracy is so popular that virtually every system claims it as its own, but the idea of the Rechtstaat or stato di diritto is better expressed in English as “rule of law.”

16. What Is Democracy? (74-75)
   a. Definition: “A majority of politically equal citizens, either in person or through their representatives.”
   b. Two principles: Political equality and majority rule.
   c. The Founders opposed democracy; Andrew Jackson introduced it to the White House along with the spoils system.

17. Liberalism: The political use of the term “liberal” began in Spain in 1812 and is both misunderstood and misused in America today.

18. Democracy and Liberalism: The predominant form of government in Western Europe is liberal democracy. It took the introduction of parliaments for a variety of coercive measures, such as Prohibition, conscription, and the 1040 Form, to be introduced.

19. Equality
   a. Alexis de Tocqueville noted that it invites totalitarianism, which requires statism.
b. The successful mobilization of envy of the many against the privileged few has become the key to success within the framework of our present-day democracies. [René Girard’s concept of “mimetic desire” suggests why].

20. Rule of Majorities (76-77)
a. Democracy is not self-rule but merely the rule of majorities over minorities
b. Political amateurism is built into democracy. The abyss between the scita [factual knowledge of voters and their representatives] and the scienda [background necessary to pass rational judgments] is ever increasing.
c. Voters are guided partly by party promises and partly by the erotic appeal of party leaders.
d. Knowledge and wisdom play an ever lessening role in this game; technocracy, (rule by the experts), not necessarily liberal, looms on the horizon.

22. Restoration of Liberal Democracy: Artificial restorations rarely last

23. Effects of Democracy (78)
a. It provides a well-lit stage for ideologically determined parties to operate.
b. It can lend an air of legitimacy to the peaceful transformation of a free country into a totalitarian tyranny.

24. Democracy's Essence Is Faith

25. Eduard von Hartmann's Critique: Europe suffers from a profound crisis of the imagination

CHAPTER 8: EUROPEAN POLITICAL PARTIES

Outline and Study Questions

1. Political Spectrum (79-80)
a. Leftism is the very negative “identitarian” tendency toward collectivism and centralism, the omnipotent state, totalitarianism, materialism.
b. Rightism is pluralistic and “diversitarian,” spiritual, freedom-loving, and hostile to what Friedrich Hayek calls the “constructivist rationalism” of the Left.

2. Extremes Never Meet: Communism and National Socialism might be described as birds of the same feather; both are left-wing.

3. There has been some mingling of Left and Right in Franco’s Falangism and the Frankfurt School associated with Adorno and Horkheimer.

4. The crystallization of parties in Europe followed the earlier British political pattern: Whigs (gentry) vs. Tories (court-centered aristocracy). Primus inter pares = first among equals.

5. Continental conservatives (agrarian background, paternalistic, socially conscious) vs.
The liberals (bourgeois intellectuals, industrialists, and bankers).

6. Extension of suffrage to poorest layer of the laboring classes hurt middle class liberals.

7. Nineteenth-Century Liberal Adaptations: Anticlericalism (e.g., Bismarck’s Kulturkampf (culture struggle against Roman Catholic influence) and nationalism (e.g., Italy’s Risorgimento).

8. Four Kinds of Liberalism (82-83)
   a. Pre-Liberals (Adam Smith, Edmund Burke, Robert Southey)
   b. Early Liberals (Alexis de Tocqueville, Frederic Bastiat, Lord Acton)
   c. Old Liberals (early J. S. Mill, Richard Cobden, Ludwig von Mises, Friedrich Hayek)
   d. New Liberals or Neo-Liberals (Wilhelm Roepke)

10. Continental liberal parties have survived chiefly in the north; avowedly conservative parties survive only in Scandinavia and Britain.

11. Christian Parties (84-86)
   a. Origin: They arose in response to the challenge from the “old liberalism,” anticlericalism, and socialism.
   b. Risks for the Church: effort to be non-partisan yet engaged with the issues.
   c. Specifically Catholic parties appeal to all social classes.
   e. Christian Democratic Union/Christian Social Union in Germany are ecumenical.

12. Socialism (Marxist in origin) and Anarchism (Russia and Spain) (86-87)
   a. Karl Marx: a frustrated artist and poet who held real workers in contempt.
   b. Socialist parties: revisionists rejected Marx’s dictatorship of the proletariat.

13. Marxism as an Ideology: Contradictions in its theory of historical inevitability (87-89)
   a. Bolsheviks called themselves Communists after the Revolution of 1917.
   b. The enmity between Socialists and Communists is that of rivals who lay claim to the “true faith.”
   c. There is a radical leftward trend among the younger generation of Socialists and Social Democrats.
   d. Both Socialists and Social Democrats have right and left wings.
   e. Both the Communists and the Social Democrats are a threat to freedom.

14. Fascism (89-90)
   a. Benito Mussolini was the son of an intellectual anarchist; he was influenced by Czech national socialists inspired by the medieval Taborites.
   b. Spanish Falangists and the Romanian Iron Guard bore only limited resemblance.

15. National Socialism (90-92)
   a. National Socialism was a virus carried by the masses, a “horizontal” mass movement far more consistently totalitarian than “vertical” Italian Fascism.
   b. Origins: Taborites and the Czech national socialists; Moravians founded what evolved into the German National Socialist Workers’ Party in 1918.
   c. Its program was nationalist and racist from the start; it became territorially divided as a result of the breakup of the Habsburg monarchy; Hitler took over one splinter group.
d. What made the triumph of National Socialism possible was simply the democratic process; it represented a synthesis of two "identitarian" forces, one deriving from ancient tribalism and the other representing a modern "herdist" heresy.

CHAPTER 9: THE ECONOMIC SCENE

Outline and Study Questions

1. Economics Is Not Decisive
   a. Sidney Fay and Giuseppe Mazzini denied that economic problems are root causes of either war or revolution.

2. History and Meaning: History of every man is the history of a failure (Sartre)

3. Modernity and Progress: The European North burst ahead at the dawn of the modern age; but England’s industrial revolution also produced a discontented urban proletariat.

4. Declining Living Standards: Medieval living standards were fairly high in Europe.

5. Costs of Industrialization: It can not be accomplished without an initial period of belt-tightening.

6. Early manufacturers: Early factory owners usually led frugal lives; their profits were largely reinvested.

7. Parsimony: Generations of frugal living made the prosperity of the present working class possible.

8. Perspective of Preceding Centuries: What we call “living standards compatible with human dignity” have even recently existed only in isolated areas.

9. Science and Industry: All of this was made possible only by their combination.

10. Role of Trade Unions: Their pressures have forced the entrepreneurs to rationalize and economize more and more, but on the negative side they can unmake an economy.

11. Raw Materials: Living standards and industrial growth rarely depend on these; overseas colonies were primarily a drag on the economy of the mother country.

12. Crime of Decolonization: The frivolous manner in which the Europeans gave up their expensive colonies was an evasion of responsibilities; dispossessed European farmers and entrepreneurs in these colonies are not well disposed toward the United States.

13. America’s Anti-Colonial Complex (98-99)
   a. It is based on a fatal misunderstanding of the term “colony,” which takes many forms; ancient Greek colonies, like the Thirteen in America, were ethnic, cultural, even religious and legal extensions of the metropolis [mother city].
b. “Colonialism” is a newly coined term with negative political connotations; modern European colonization filled a power vacuum and sprang from a mixture of secular, religious, patriotic, military, and economic motives.

c. On the whole, despite its seamy side (e.g., the Belgian Congo), the European colonial record was not shameful; natives were generally less humane in dealing with other natives. [On the other hand, René Girard maintains that the West has set a much higher standard of behavior, due to the influence of the Bible, which may intensify both the harm done by its shortcomings and its resulting guilt].

14. State Interference in Economics
a. The provider state rests on the conviction that people can become politically but not economically mature, with some reason due to worldwide governmental manipulation of the currency.

b. A socialist state concentrates the means of production in “public” hands.

15. Socialization as a One-Way Street (99-100)
a. Once an industry is nationalized, a succeeding non-socialist government will have the greatest difficulties in auctioning it off. [In the 1980s, Margaret Thatcher promoted greater privatization in England and François Mitterand reversed his policy of nationalizing French industry in 1984].

16. Co-Management

17. Speculation and Spending Habits

18. European Unification: The European Economic Community [now the European Union] has expanded beyond the ten members at the time of writing (1979). The Pan-Europe Union, founded by Count Richard Coudenhove-Kalergi, was at the time of writing headed by Otto von Habsburg (who also has served in the European Parliament), with whom the author was closely associated.

19. All-European Organizations: They include the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD); NATO; and the European Free Trade Association (EFTA), which is now down to four members (Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway, and Switzerland) that are not members of the European Union (EU).

CHAPTER 10: NATIONALITIES AND LANGUAGES

Outline and Study Questions

1. Ethnic Nationality: For the sake of simplicity, the author equates it with language.

2. Indo-European Languages and Their Branches: The chief western branches are the Germanic (Teutonic), Celtic, Romance (Italic), Slavic (Slavonic), Baltic, Hellenic (Greek), and Thraco-Illyrian (Albanian is the last remnant). The eastern branches include Armenian, Persian, and Indic (derived from Sanskrit).

3. Variations (104-05)
a. Considered an ethnic unit in Europe, but the average French Jew is culturally French; Yiddish is a medieval form of German; Balkan Jews speak Ladino, a late medieval Spanish dialect.
b. Lapps are linguistically but not ethnically related to the Finns.
c. The Irish are linguistically but not ethnically English.

4. Omissions: Moldavian (Moldovan) is a Rumanian dialect written in Cyrillic script.

5. Dialects: These are usually tribal and often political in character.

7. Literary Languages: Literary German is the German of Luther’s translation of the Bible; Italian is the Tuscan dialect of Dante; Spanish is essentially Castilian; Dutch [a form of Low German] is an idiom of North and South Holland (two of the dozen provinces of the Netherlands); French is the language of the Paris region (Île de France).

8. Ambling Commentary on Several Languages (106-07)
   a. French has been a prestigious international language since the seventeenth century; variants include Provençal (Languedoc) and Walloon.
   b. Galician and Ladino
   c. Portuguese
   d. Dutch and German
   e. Swedish
   f. Hebrew: Part of the Semitic family, which includes Arabic, Ethiopian, and Maltese.

9. Romance Languages: French, Italian, Spanish, Catalan, Galician, Portuguese, Rumanian. Spanish, like other European languages, incorporated numerous Arabic words, such as alcohol (al-quhl), algebra, and alcalde (al-qadi = mayor).

10. Latin Traits: Kuehnelt-Leddihn found some evidence of a distinctive Latin mind or culture [Francis Lieber traced this notion to Napoleon III, an Anglophobe who wished to claim hegemony over the Mediterranean lands and who set up an emperor in Mexico].

11. Effects of Transplantation: Ethnic groups may be transformed from the original stock but Latin traits are often misunderstood.

12. Rumanians and Aromunians: East Europeans who are linguistically Latin.

13. High German: Thuringian-Saxon

14. Low German: The three literary languages are Dutch, Frisian (the Frisian Islands belong to the Netherlands; surnames typically end in -stra), and English. (109)
   a. English dropped the great complexities (such as the declension of adjectives and nouns) of Low German grammar; words of Germanic and Latin origin are treated differently.

15. Scandinavian Languages: Common root is Old Norse; Finns are culturally but not linguistically or ethnically Scandinavians.

17. Slavic Languages: Russian, Polish, Czech, and many others. Cyrillic (derived from the Greek) alphabet is only a minor problem for foreign students, but the western branches use the Latin script.

18. Slavic Origins: Slavs were originally a rural people who followed in the train of German migration.

19. Cultural Differences: Culturally, but not linguistically, Slovenes are Austrians; Croats and Serbs speak almost the same language, but the Catholic Croats are Central European Slavs who use a Latin script while the Orthodox Serbs are East European Slavs who use a modified Cyrillic script; the Bosnian Muslims are Croats by descent and language; Dalmatian Croats have been influenced by Venetian culture (and were once part of the Venetian Empire); there has been a long intermingling of Hungarians and Slovaks.

20. Bulgars: Old Slavonic is the original language of the region; Macedonian is a variant.

21. Celtic Languages: Only Irish Gaelic (Erse), Scottish Gaelic, Welsh (Cymric), and Breton survive.

22. Baltic Languages: Latvian and Lithuanian.

23. Albanian: A family of language dialects distinct from Greek.

25. In the Caucasus, Ossetians and Armenians round out the Indo-European speakers; N. Y. Marr’s theory linking Georgian with Basque and Etruscan has been discredited.

26. Basque (Euskara): The Basques are the only remnant of the original Iberians.

27. Uralic-Altaic (113)
   b. Turkish-Tartar group: Turkish, Tartar, Uzbek, Kyrgyz

28. Alphabets (113-14)
   a. The majority of European languages use Latin letters, but the languages that are richer in sounds make use of diacritical signs; only English and Dutch use the pure Latin alphabet without using any modifying additions.
   b. Cyrillic letters are more practical for this purpose.
   c. The German Gothic alphabet survives in isolated instances.
   d. Greek, Hebrew, and Arabic are the other scripts used in Europe; Turkish has shed its Arabic alphabet in favor of a modified Latin alphabet.
   e. Runic and Ogam scripts have long since disappeared.

29. Music and the Arts: Culture (such as folk music and folk art) vs. civilization (opera arias).

30. Foods: Gastronomic Epicureanism of all classes in Southern Europe.

31. Boundaries: Political boundaries do not correspond to the national ones.

PART II: THE NATION-STATES OF EUROPE

CHAPTER 11: GREAT BRITAIN

Outline and Study Questions

1. Peaceful Evolution: Checkered racial background. What happened to the Norman ruling class? What replaced it? How did it compare with the European burghers? NOTE: A good source on Britain’s ethnic diversity is David Hackett Fischer’s Albion’s Seed, who identifies four British folkways that shaped early America: Puritans from East Anglia to Massachusetts, Cavaliers and indentured servants from the South of England to Virginia, Quakers from the North Midlands to the Delaware Valley, and Scotch-Irish and other emigrants the North to the Backcountry of America. Invasions, crystallization of classes, rise of the burgher class [middle class]. NOTE: The Labour Party was eclipsed for a time under Margaret Thatcher, but the “rule of the working classes” (or their university-educated representatives) still prevails.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE: Kuehnelt-Leddihn, whose stepfather was English, spoke English with a British accent (French, the lingua franca of the aristocracy, was his first language). He learned Japanese, I believe, under a military attaché in Austria around 1930, who became Gen. Yamashita (and whose innocence of war crimes K-L stoutly maintained). During his decade of exile in the United States, K-L taught at four colleges, including Japanese at Fordham during WWII. Another European aristocrat who has lived in Britain most of his life is Count Nikolai Tolstoy, whose stepfather was the novelist Patrick O’Brian.

2. History of Emancipations: The nobility (1215-1688), Catholics (1788-1829), middle Class and Jews (1830-1860); working classes and women (after WWI). Two chief historical forms of government: aristocratic oligarchy and rule of the working classes (which may prove to be as short-lived as royal absolutism under the Tudors and Stuarts).

3. Geographic Expansion: English monarch also held title of King of France. Welsh, Scottish, and Irish nationalism have led to “devolution” despite relative loss of native Languages.
   a. English Hegemony: The British established a rule of law and order, with justice and a certain amount of fairness, wherever they were in command, the glaring [but not the only] exception being Ireland. Britain’s ability to maintain its Commonwealth of Nations does testify to the relative success of its colonial enterprise.

4. Plasticity of Nations: The overwhelming influence of the Normans during the centuries of their rule could hardly been matched or repeatedly anywhere today; the spirit of heroic resistance survived in the Jacobites [supporters of the ousted James II and his successors] and the Lollards [contemporaries of Wyclif]. As to the loss of heroic resistance, see Lee Harris’s The Suicide of Reason on the generation that fought WWII.

5. Richness of the English Heritage: Prodigious vocabulary derived from Latin and Teutonic sources; ethnic variety[see David Hackett Fischer’s Albion’s Seed].

6. Anglomania on the Continent: See David Landes’s The Wealth and Poverty of Nations. But the England of the democrats, liberals, and industrialists was also the England that gave refuge, aid, and comfort to destructive minds and movements from the Continent. It was everything to all men. The Anglomania remark is also passing nod to Holland’s earlier Tulipomania. (122-24)
a. Reasons for the Fading of Anglomania: Disestablishment of the Empire, Britain's financial plight, the presence of British troops all over the Continent.
b. British Tourists: NOTE: Soccer hooliganism is a serious problem, but a recent poll placed French tourists at the bottom of the list.

7. Reasons for Britain's Decline: A “brain drain” associated with democratization; free public education favored upward mobility and “deprived the lower layers of their talents.” NOTE: The phenomenon of the “brain drain” is more extensive than usually understood. In his autobiography, Gentle Regrets, Roger Scruton speaks of his trade unionist father’s adamant opposition to his pursuit of a Cambridge education.
   a. Decline of Energy: Weakened work ethic
   b. Organized Labor: Sullenness, threat to British survival, ideological socialism
   c. Fool’s Paradise of British Labor: Destruction of export markets, ruin of currency, strikes. NOTE: “The British disease” was the common European taunt in the 1970s. Margaret Thatcher (1979-1990) broke a major strike intended to topple her government and finally brought the unions to heel. PM Tony Blair promoted a Clintonesque New Labour model.
   c. New Egalitarianism: Hearkening back to Wat Tyler (Peasants’ Revolt of 1381) and the Levelers, the Diggers, and Fifth Monarchy Men of the English Civil War (1640s). The illusion of money left the working classes close to bankruptcy. NOTE: The international credit crisis of 2008 is largely a consequence of widespread financial irresponsibility.
   d. Ire of the Masses: Turning against the middle classes
   e. Franz Zweig noted a high degree of hopelessness and anomia. NOTE: The cynical world-weariness depicted here is difficult to square with vibrant self-government. The increasing concentration of power in an increasingly bureaucracy-ridden European Union seems to track a growing demoralization. Political apathy and cynicism represent an existential threat to national independence and a people’s capacity to govern themselves. As for guest-workers: Since 1979 when this book was published, the guest-worker population has changed dramatically. Italy is now a leading economic power. Southern Europeans have been largely replaced by citizens of the former colonies, including Muslims from South Asia, and East Europeans.

8. Nearness of the Continent: Opposition to the Common Market among the TUC and some Conservatives. Canterbury (where Thomas à Becket was martyred in The Murder in the Cathedral) was once a major place of pilgrimage and Britain was an integral part of Europe.
   a. Reformation: Abyss created between England and the Continent. (127)
   b. Latitudinarianism of the Anglicans: The threefold division is now (2009) further complicated by African bishops who are now overseeing traditional Anglican churches in America.
   c. Uneasiness over the Continent: Lack of Einfühlungsvermögen

9. Catholics and Anti-Catholic Attitudes: Labour PM Tony Blair (1997-2007) converted to Roman Catholicism not long after he stepped down as PM. He has been seeking the presidency of the European Union under the proposed Treaty Constitution.

10. Fear of the Continent: The Chunnel was finally built between 1988 and 1994. K-L notes that self-conscious means opposite things for the English and the Germans. He also senses a communalitarianism that can easily fall into [often chauvinistic] identitarianism. This is one of the hazards of what David Riesman (The Lonely Crowd) called the "other-directed" personality. The Victorian political commentator Walter Bagehot (who wrote The English Constitution) believed that this sort of conformism (along with stupidity) was a necessary element of political democracy.

CHAPTER 12: IRELAND

Outline and Study Questions

1. Racial Background and Early History: Milesians (mentioned in Irish mythology, see p. 119), Celts, Vikings and Danes, Norman English established the Pale (An Pháil Shasanach) in the 12C. Cromwellian genocide c. 1649-50 [the extent of civilian casualties is disputed; the massacre of Protestants with thousands of casualties during the Irish Rebellion in 1641 is not mentioned]. Irish Catholic support of the Stuart line. Irish Defeat: Battle of the Boyne, 1690. Irish monasteries in the 5-7C were centers of Christian faith and civilization during the so-called Dark Ages. Abolition of the Irish parliament, 1801.

a. The Ascendancy: Early Irish nationalism was led by Protestants like Wolfe Tone. Contributions to politics and the arts by Swift, Shaw, Wilde, and others.

3. Ireland under British Rule: Potato Blight of 1845 caused a famine that lasted until 1848. Unmilled corn was sent by the British government to replace the potatoes but compounded the tragedy. Ireland lost a quarter of its population: about a million to starvation and another million to emigration.

4. British Prime Minister William Gladstone’s proposal for Irish Home Rule late in the 19C might have solved the Irish problem and avoided the subsequent Troubles.

5. The narrowness and Manichean-Jansenist tendencies of Irish Catholicism.

6. Prodi defiance of an attempt to introduce Home Rule in 1914 delayed implementation until the outbreak of the First World War scrubbed the plan. The Easter Rebellion of 1916 was brutally suppressed. The Irish troubles continued until a compromise was reached in 1921. Discrimination against and the ghettoization of Catholics remained a serious problem at the time the book was published. Political unrest from 1968-1994 created a second time of troubles. Although the bulk of the population supports union with Britain, most Protestants regard themselves as British and most Catholics call themselves Irish.

7. Catholic resistance to British rule: Social Democratic Party, IRA Officials, IRA Provisionals (Provos). The author was not optimistic about a solution to the strife, given the fanaticism he witnessed on both sides of the conflict. The Prods reminded him of the pieds noirs (black feet), the French residents of Algeria who fought savagely in the 1950s to keep Algeria as a part of France.

CHAPTER 26: THE RUSSIANS AND THE SOVIET UNION

Outline and Study Questions

A. RUSSIA: ORIGINS AND EMPIRE (238-41)

1. Russification of national minorities taking place even as the Russians become the largest minority.
a. Great Russians, who have low birth rate, are being imported into the republics. NOTE: Many of those Russians have migrated back to Russia following national independence for fourteen of these republics. Kazakhstan has moved its capital northward to assert its effective claim to the entirely of this largest of the breakaway republics. In 2014 Moscow continued to try to draw Ukraine and other former republics into a closer relationship.

2. Kiev and Kievan Rus
a. Rus is probably of Viking (Varangian) origin. In the 9C Ryurik or Rurik the Red founded a Scandinavian nobility that ruled over a Slavic people. Scandinavian rule was established along the big rivers. In Note 664, K-L notes that the academic career of Andrei Amalrik [later author of Will the Soviet Union Survive until 1984?] was ruined for adhering to the Scandinavian theory of origins.
b. Cultural development started in the south through Byzantine influences, so that Russia fell into the Greek Orthodox rather than the Roman Catholic orbit.
c. Tatars (Mongol invaders) destroyed the Kievan realm in the 13C.
d. Delivery from Tatar rule came from the north: The commercial republic of Novgorod and the grand duchy of Muscovy (Moscow), which eventually absorbed Novgorod.
e. By the 17C Cossacks reached the Pacific coast.

3. Romanov Dynasty
a. Death of Ivan Grozny (Ivan the Dread), the last Ryurik ruler.
b. Michael Romanov, a kinsman of Ivan's wife, was elevated from the boyar class.
c. Peter the Great: Split in the Church, beards and caftans forbidden (much as Atatürk did in 20C Turkey), and westernized the country with great brutality. He called himself Imperator Augustus rather than Tsar.
d. Russia (Moscow) had already been called the Third Rome and a coat of arms with the imperial double-eagle gradually became more “westernized.”

4. Westernization
a. Holstein-Gottorps Dynasty (beginning with Peter III, whose mother was Peter the Great’s daughter and who was overthrown by his wife, Catherine the Great). Nevertheless, the royal house was considered Romanov until Nicholas II and his family were murdered in 1918 by the Bolsheviks.
c. Decembrist Uprising, 1825. Note 668: The author discusses the legend that Alexander I became a starets or wandering holy man, Feodor Kuzmich, who entered the annals of history in 1836 and, after his death, was elevated to sainthood. The motive according to tradition is that Alexander, who had been disappointed in the loss of his daughter and his attempts to make things better for his people, chose to disappear late in 1825 and do penance for the death of his father. He had been present when his father was assassinated in 1801.
d. Serfdom: Some were professional people; some became rich

e. Workers
f. Labor unions were often organized by police to prevent exploitation. Forced labor (kátorga) in Siberia.
g. Fyodor Dostoevsky’s The House of the Dead
h. Siberia
  1) Vladimir Lenin’s comfortable exile

5. Comparisons
a. Russia is a part of Christian civilization
b. Miguel de Cervantes’ Don Quixote strikes a chord with Russians and Dostoevsky does with Spaniards
c. Despotism of Ivan IV and Henry VIII
d. Peter the Great and Oliver Cromwell as brutal reformers
e. Forced labor and repression

6. Pyotr Stolypin’s Reforms
   a. Dissolution of the mir [comparable to the 16C enclosure of the English commons]
   b. Big landowners actually controlled a far greater percentage of English property

7. Industry
   a. Fear of the “Russian steam roller:” considered the America of the East [cf. the end of Book One of Alexis de Tocqueville’s Democracy in America]; new class of entrepreneurs.

B. REVOLUTIONS AND THE USSR (241-50)

1. Liberalization after the Revolution of 1905
   a. Press and religious freedoms
   b. Pravda

2. Imperial Jails
   a. Leon Trotsky
   b. Ilya Ehrenburg

3. The Great Life
   a. Not a single Bolshevik was executed until after the Bolshevik Revolution. Note 686: All those that had been executed were anarchists [which presumably included Lenin’s brother].

4. Bolshevism
   a. Russia’s development probably would have been evolutionary except for the intervention of the First World War.
   b. Three factors favored the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 [the February Revolution was liberal; the October Revolution was radical]
      1) Immense stupidity of some liberal democrats and Mensheviks. K-L adds in Note 677: “It is more or less the thesis of George Karkov that the moderate Left made a revolution without being certain that they could actually control it. . . . The [subsequent] dream of pious Western liberals that a post-Communist Russia will emerge in the form of a tame, pluralistic democracy will never come true.”
      2) Gen. Erich Ludendorff’s assistance [Lenin shipped to the Finland Station in St. Petersburg in a sealed boxcar]
      3) The role of Vladimir Lenin: A “Pugachev of the university” was used to describe the Russian Nihilists [Pugachev led a rebellion, 1773-74].
   c. Bolsheviks won the support a “disintegrating army and navy” of marauders with nothing to lose.

5. Weaknesses of the Old Regime
   a. Corruption. Note 680: “Eastern ‘corruption’ has two sources: the frequently miserable salaries of civil servants and the desire to make (if possible generous) recompense for any services rendered.”
   b. Ethnic and religious discrimination

6. Discrimination against Jews
   a. Integration of baptized Jews, like the musical Rubinstein brothers [Anton was Tchaikovsky’s teacher; his famous Piano Trio was a memorial to Nikolai]
   b. The Pale of Settlement and the ghettos [after the It. borghetto]
c. Pogroms. Note 682: “The main reason for the pogrom was not hatred, but simple envy and rapacity.”
d. Arts, crafts, and professions
e. Farmers
f. University quotas [cf. California’s Asian quotas]

7. Role of Moderate Leftists
   a. The February Revolution turned the war into a fight for world democracy
   b. Fight against the Bolsheviks was continued by anarchists and monarchists [the White Army also received aid from the Allies after the German defeat]

8. The Russian as an Extreme Personalist [K-L regarded Russians as far more individualistic than Americans]
   a. A natural anarchist rather than a statist
   b. Comparison with the Spaniard [note James Billington’s similar comparison]
   c. Edward Crankshaw: Uncompromising and mentally free
   d. Thirst for the absolute [cf. the Muscovite ideology]

9. Harmful Effects of Western Ideas
   a. Misunderstanding and perversion of these ideas
      1) Parliamentary democracy [note Yeltsin’s armed assault on the Duma]
      2) Marxism transformed by Leninism
   b. Analogy with the wild growth of exotic plants

10. Dmitry Merezhkovski (Russian Symbolist) on Bolshevism
    a. Shape of the Soviet mind
    b. Russia is an extremely gifted nation

11. [Second] Russian Revolution of 1917
    a. A soulless bureaucracy was a creation of part of the intelligentsia
    b. Totalitarian rule of the ubiquitous monopolistic state
    c. Illegality of non-state activities

12. Books
    a. High literacy
    b. Classics
    c. Vladimir Soloviev [who wrote a story of the Antichrist] and Nicolas Berdyaev [I read The Origins of Russian Communism under Edward Rozek and later added other works]
    d. Fyodor Dostoevsky
    e. Secret catalogues in libraries
    f. Samizdat
    g. Secretive side of the Russian character

13. Attacks on Communism
    a. Viktor Nekrasov [Note 692 discusses his revelation that the Red Army held back and let the Nazis wipe out the 1944 uprising in Warsaw. K-L notes that Nekrasov’s report from Italy (published in Novy Mir, vol. XXXIV, no. 7 and 8) “is marred by an account of the ‘crimes’ committed by the Jesuits (part 2, p. 127). Nekrasov admitted to me that he had copied this nonsense almost verbatim from the Great Soviet Encyclopedia.”]
    b. Vera Panova

14. Literary Periodicals

15. Religion
48

a. Revival in 1942
b. 1958 crackdown
c. Closure of churches: catechism forbidden
d. Elderly parishioners [but K-L had observed the same decades earlier]
e. Religious samizdat literature

16. Persecution
   a. Unofficial Baptists
   b. Eastern Rite (Uniate) Catholics
   c. World Council of Churches (WCC) [a Communist front] offers no protection
   d. “Westerners cannot measure the despair of those who nevertheless cling to their faith, and practice it in secrecy.”
   e. A totalitarian state cannot tolerate the idea of a church

17. The New Society [dominated by what Milovan Djilas called The New Class]
   a. Simultaneously egalitarian and hierarchical
   b. Alexander Solzhenitsyn: Women given the dirtiest jobs
      1) Low birth rate

18. University Professors [this applies also to the Nomenklatura generally]
   a. Academy of Sciences
   b. High salary is a bribe
   c. Communist student is “a parrot without feathers”

19. Upper Echelons of the Nomenklatura [a feudal patron-client system through which the Communist Party governed appointments]
   a. Absence of hereditary property ownership
   b. Lack of savings
   c. Big earners
   d. Alcoholism

20. Life Hidden from Tourists
   a. Rents are cheap per family

21. Crime
   a. Lack of statistical data
   b. Criminal syndicates. Note 698: “One of the worst aspects of the life of the ‘politicals’ is their symbiosis with criminals.”

22. Monotony and Penury
   a. Collectivized peasantry
   b. Farms cannot feed the country
   c. The grey market

23. Convergence Theory
   a. Two fallacies
      1) That economics is the decisive factor in life. “Communism, very much like democracy, is an irrational secular religion. Not one of the tenets of either system can be proved, whether rationally or scientifically; they are creeds pure and simple.”
      2) That the USSR is on the road to free enterprise. K-L calls this childish and adds: “It might apply to the Chinese, who are pragmatists. But the Russian never was a pragmatist. He is a religious man and will die for his conviction. Bolshevism is a messianism. Hence its dynamic—abroad, that is.” Edward Rozek occasionally taunted the Leftist true believers who opposed him in class, saying: “I appreciate the courage of your confusions.”

24. Socialism: A Clear but False Idea
   a. Its advantage: It is easy to explain
   b. Most Soviet citizens recognize the system is fundamentally wrong

25. German Invasion
   a. The people welcomed them, but then stalled and fought back. “Germany could have had Russia on a platter—but not Germany under Hitler. One socialism cannot defeat another one.”

26. Prospects for the End
   a. A Third World War
   b. Revolution is more likely to end Communism than evolution, but not a well-prepared and well-organized revolution
   c. Worst uprising took place at Novocherkassk in 1962 [26 died in food riots when machine-gunned by Soviet troops]
   d. Horror of a peasant uprising
      1) The Chinese would break into the political void left by the USSR
   e. Churches would be filled.
   f. But liberal democracy is not in Russia’s future

C. THE WHITE RUTHENIANS, UKRAINIANS, GEORGIANS, AND ARMENIANS (250-52)

1. White Ruthenians (there were also Black and Red Ruthenians)
   a. Byelorussia [Belarus]
   b. Influence of the Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth
   c. Emerging nation

2. Ukrainians
   a. Source of resistance and self-assertion is in Eastern Galicia [in western Ukraine]
   b. Eastern Rite Catholics (Uniates)
   c. The desire to separate from Imperial Russia spread also to the East Ukraine
   d. Brief period of independence
   e. Treaty of Brest-Litovsk [voided by the German defeat]

3. Cultural Differences
   a. Moscow’s ascendency in Russia was a result of the Tatar occupation of Kiev
   b. Kiev is far more culturally western

4. German Occupation and Subsequently
   a. People enjoyed greater freedom under German administration
   b. Pitched battles were fought in the mid-1960s between Ukrainians and Russians
   c. Soviet authorities closed off some areas due to nationalism [later, Chernobyl rendered a sizeable area uninhabitable]

5. Efforts to Denationalize the Ukrainians [similar to other captive peoples]
   a. Russians and Jews imported into Kiev
   b. Prospect of independence

6. Caucasus
   a. Various small tribes
   b. Well-developed religious sentiments
   c. World’s greatest hodge-podge of tribes, faiths, and languages
   d. Oldest ties with Russia were aristocratic
e. Armenia and Georgia have ancient roots

CHAPTER 27: THE LATE HABSBURG MONARCHY

Outline

A. HABSBURG DYNASTY (252-59)

1. Alsatian-Swiss Dynasty
   a. Rudolf's inheritance
   b. Tyrol
   c. Maximilian I
      1) Burgundy (the domain of Charlemagne’s grandson including the Netherlands) received as a dowry (it was originally part of Lothair’s middle portion of the Carolingian empire)
   d. Charles V
   e. Louis II
      1) Double marriage contract [Ferdinand and Anna, Louis and Mary]
      2) Battle of Mohács: Louis died without issue
   f. Wars against the Turks [Suleiman reached the Gates of Vienna in 1529]
   g. Arnold Toynbee

2. Duel with Prussia
   a. Francis II, Emperor of Austria
   b. German League
   c. Battle of Königgrätz
   d. Proclamation of German emperor at Versailles
   e. Austria and Hungary

3. Size

4. Western Disregard
   a. Raymond Aron: Second War of the Austrian succession
   b. Prejudice against the Habsburgs
   c. Note: George D. Herron promoted the break up

5. Nationalities
   a. Shortcomings of the Dual Monarchy
   b. Multinational empire that did not include the Serbs and Rumanians
   c. Insiders
6. Historic Identity
   a. There was never a Slovenian or Slovak state until the early 1990s

7. Vertical vs. Horizontal Loyalties
   a. French Revolution and Romanticism [particularly the “cult” of Prometheus]
      1) Earlier attachments were between individuals: rulers and ruled
      2) Now came the spread of collectivist, horizontal, democratic ideas
   b. National awakening: Impossibility of drawing satisfactory borders because of the intermingling of peoples

8. Psychological Errors of the German Austrians (who ruled the Czechs and Slovenes) and the Magyar Hungarians (who ruled the Slovaks, Croats, and Transylvanians)
   a. Arrogance
   b. Acquisition of language and culture
   c. Publishing and translations [K-L was fluent in Hungarian and eight other languages, having obtained his doctorate from the University of Hungary]
   d. Aristocrats knew other languages
   e. Gap between Polish and English languages

9. Empire’s Lack of Regard for Historic Rights
   a. German nationalists scorned the Crown of St. Wenceslaus
   b. Hungarian nationalists had little regard for Croatia [Duchies of Pannonia and Dalmatia existed in the early 9C]
   c. Franz Ferdinand
      1) Proposed federation

10. Middle Class Nationalism
    a. Healthy imperial “skeleton”
    b. State machinery
    c. Collapse

11. Dual Monarchy
    a. Only the Czechs succeed in creating something like a democracy
    b. Life was free and easy
    c. Suffrage [one-man, one-vote system in 1907] and a free press

12. Dismemberment of the Monarchy
    a. Galicia and Silesia
    b. Rumania
    c. Italy
    d. Austria

13. New Countries
    a. Poland
    b. Rumania
    c. Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia
    d. French goal
       1) Impossible to achieve with new, synthetic phantom states
    e. Czechoslovakia
    f. Yugoslavia
    g. Absurdity of France’s alliance with the Little Entente
       1) Romania
       2) Prevention of a return of the Habsburg
       3) Eduard Beneš

14. German Geo-Political Victory
France’s Maginot mentality (contrary to Capt. Charles de Gaulle) [The Germans simply bypassed the Maginot Line of fortresses when they invaded in 1940]

15. Balkanization (Fragmentation or Atomization)
   a. Ernst Kornemann
   b. Fragile mosaic
   c. Zwischeneuropa
   d. Prison of nations: The USSR inherited the position of jailer
   e. Short-sightedness of political leadership

16. Third War of the Austrian Succession (WWII)
   a. Sinister role played by George D. Herron

B. AUSTRIA (260-71)

1. Federal Republic
   a. Industrialization
   b. Vienna

2. Problematic Country: Deeply Divided
   a. Autonomy of the Nine Länder
   b. Viennese music
   c. Dark cultural themes

3. Racial Character
   a. Bavarian “colonialism”
   b. Intermingling of Germans and Slovenes

4. Slavic background
   a. Demotic (populist) temper
   1) Battery and assault are frequent crimes

5. Länder (regions)
   a. Salzburg acquired in 1815: Originally an Imperial bishopric
   b. Italian-speaking Trieste was acquired in the 14C
   c. Tyrol
      1) Innsbruck’s cultural ties with Bavaria [K-L lived at nearby Lans]
   d. South Tyrol

6. Vorarlberg
   a. Swabian-Alemannic and Roman Catholic
   b. Switzerland

7. Ethnic identity

8. Nationality
   a. Different self-identifications
   b. Attitudes about the Anschluss
   c. Habsburg dynasty
   d. SDP support
      1) Karl Renner
   e. Adolf Hitler as a native son
   f. Österreich and Ostmark
   g. Anti-historical policy

9. German Austria
   a. An Anschluss in 1919 might have prevented the Nazi rise 10. Crises
   a. Inflation
   b. Republikanischer Schutzbund [republican defense alliance]
   c. Engelbert Dollfuss
      1) Heimwehr

   a. Topic: Integrity of Austria
   b. Risk to Czechoslovakia
   c. Mussolini’s intention: Invasion of Ethiopia
   d. Western objections
   e. Hoare and Laval attempted a compromise
   f. Anthony Eden pushed sanctions
      1) Mussolini became the bogeyman
   g. Mussolini driven into the arms of the Germans

13. Western Dithering over Austria
   a. Concessions to Hitler

14. Anschluss
   a. Plebiscite
   b. Note: Lord Halifax spearheaded the appeasement policy

15. Conquest of Austria
   a. Soviet attitude
   b. Resistance
   c. British
   d. Arrest of those who had resisted the Communists
      1) Deportation of Vlásovsky and Domobranci
   e. Rapes by Soviet troops

16. Occupation
   a. Vienna surrounded by Soviet-controlled territory
   b. Four sectors

17. Austrian Miracle
   a. Reunification

18. Soviet Motives
   a. Neutralization to create a political vacuum
   b. Demoralization of the occupying Soviet forces
   c. Interruption of the direct land bridge between Germany and Italy, forcing a detour in the shipment of NATO troops and war matériel

19. Socialism

20. Abortion law: The Lutheran bishop protested more than the Catholic bishops
21. Conformity
   a. Envy
   b. Herr Karl
   c. Dr. Karl Renner

22. Austrian character

23. Intellect

24. The Misfortunes of Franz Joseph: Brother of Emperor Maximilian of Mexico and father of Rudolf, who probably committed suicide at Mayerling]

C. CZECHOSLOVAKIA (271-283)

1. New Country
