FIRST CFAW boasts big number

By Rhonda Keene, reporter

Prospective students from across the nation received their first look at Liberty University last week. The school hosted its annual Scaremare October 20, 2002.

An average of 200 students have attended Scaremare, a Western-themed CFAW at the beginning of the fall semester in the last three years, according to Bill Hedges, director of Public Relations.

"We have seen an increase in the number of students interested in Liberty," Hedges said. "Our goal is for each student to feel comfortable upon arrival. If you come to visit the campus, you will see that this is a diverse community," Hedges said. "We want students to feel comfortable in their new home and enjoy their time here."

HUNTER HUN — Dr. John Hunt challenged the congregation to give up their time to Christ.

Based on feedback, one of the most popular sessions of the conference seemed to be Rick Davis and "Worship and Service in the Church" workshop, John said. "It was a high point that helped to light the importance of a working relationship between the pastor and the worship leaders.

The mood at the conference was down this year, according to John, who has worked Super Conference for 15 years. Generally about 700-800 vocations for the week. Some teachers canceled classes as well. Generally about 700-800.vocations for the week.

OCTOBER 22, 2002
By Anthony Rago, columnist

In October 1517, Martin Luther was 28 years old, a monk in the Augustinian order. He was a member of the Dominican order, dedicated to a life of prayer and contemplation. However, his life was about to change dramatically due to one decision he made.

Luther was a firm believer in the power of the church and the authority of the Pope. He was convinced that the sale of indulgences was a corrupt practice and a hindrance to true faith. This belief led him to write 95 Theses, a series of propositions outlining his views on the church's practices.

The theses were printed and distributed throughout Europe, and Luther's ideas quickly spread. The sale of indulgences was abolished, and the church began to rethink its approach to selling spiritual benefits. However, this change did not come without challenges. Luther's actions had consequences.

The Pope excommunicated Luther, and the political and religious leaders of Europe threatened to use military force to put down the new ideas. Luther was forced to flee to the safety of the Castle of Wartburg, where he translated the Bible into German. This translation of the Bible made the Word of God accessible to the common people, and it became a cornerstone of the Reformation.

In the end, Luther's decision to write the 95 Theses had a profound impact on the course of history. It initiated the Protestant Reformation and paved the way for the development of many Christian denominations. Luther's legacy continues to be felt today, as his ideas and insights continue to shape the religious landscape of the world.

Miss America gives great example

Miss America errodes true values

This year, millions of men, women, and girls crowded around their television screens as Miss Illinois was crowned Miss America. It is a fact that the men and boys were definitely not watching for the same reasons as the women and girls. Women should not be objectified just because they are a sex object to get a reaction. This year, Miss America gave us a positive role model and a feminist icon.

The exploitation of the female body for the profit of a television network or for personal profit is unethical at best.

The pageant was watched by over 100 million people worldwide. The protestors won, and the women of the feminist movement emerged stronger than ever.

Americans like to believe that food and sex are the two main ideas of their lives. We have freedom of speech with the exception that we are unable to be harnessed, used, and become the reasons of others.

We are not safe! Unbelievable! We are not safe! It’s time to look at life and start to go to work. Before October 22, 2002, we knew that we would not be safe. Yet, in a split second, our world was overturned. We had to begin to figure out how to survive the horror we had been greeted.

A trip to the grocery store or a friend’s birthday will no longer be a guarantee of a good time. Could that person really kill you? What about him? We operate under the assumption that we cannot control our environment, but we are the best at not even pay attention to the people in our lives, and even if the worst happens we just fight on.

Nuclear weapons are dangerous and must be destroyed

The recent events in the Middle East have highlighted the dangers posed by nuclear weapons. These weapons are capable of causing immense destruction and loss of life. It is crucial that efforts are made to prevent their proliferation and ensure their eventual dismantlement.

Nuclear war is a terrifying possibility, and the stakes are high. The potential consequences of nuclear weapons are catastrophic, both in terms of human suffering and environmental destruction.

The international community must take action to prevent the spread and use of nuclear weapons. Diplomatic efforts, arms control agreements, and disarmament processes are essential in addressing this global threat.

The safety and security of the world depend on our commitment to a nuclear-free future. Let us work together to ensure that nuclear weapons never again pose a threat to humanity and our planet.
The event began with a performance by Among Thorns, a group that began as a college worship band in Beaumont, Texas. The worship vocalist Chad Varnagin began the concert, saying, "We're not afraid of who we are, so why should we sing about it, and why should we apologize for our testimony?"

The Schilling Center wrestling room above the Holiday House is also the venue for LU's kickboxing classes. These kickboxing sessions are unique, because at the end of each session there is a short devotional lead by the instructor, such as "Embrace this place, O Lord." Another highlight of the night was when Orrico arrived on stage quickly prompting anyone remaining audience members to rise to their feet. Orrico had a bubbly, energetic stage presence. This 10-year-old amped the audience with her incredibly vocal range.

Orrico told the audience to be careful about the decisions they make, saying, "My decisions are always about my future. I've always been a Christian, and I've always known that God is the only way." She then sang "Bless the Lord," and students were encouraged to rise to their feet along with the board members.

It's so much fun, but the instructors really know how to kick your butt. If you were on a television show, then your make-up would always look perfect and your hair would never have to be done again. If you were on a television show, then you would always look put together. If you were on a television show, then you would never have to deal with acne or circles under your eyes.

If you were on a television show, then you would always be the MTV News anchor. If you were on a television show, then you would always be the MTV News anchor. If you were on a television show, then you would always be the MTV News anchor. If you were on a television show, then you would always be the MTV News anchor.

Kickboxing is a great way to get a total body workout, while learning self-defense moves, as well. You can kick away the stress and the loneliness or sexually transmitted diseases. NEWSBOYS—NEWSBOYS Remixed

BY TOM PETERS, reporter

쌉니다! I am a fan of Newsboys. They are one of my absolute favorite groups of all time. And, I'm not alone. I am not the only one who loves this band.

They are so good. "The Newsboys Remixed" is one of their most popular albums. The album contains some of their greatest hits, as well as some new songs that are sure to impress Newsboys fans.

The album starts off with a modern reworking of "Shine," a song from their debut album. The reworked version features new lyrics and a different production style, but the song's melody and message remain true to the original.

Another highlight of the album is the song "The Change Inside Of Me," which features the voice of Peter Fuller. His vocal performance gives legitimacy to several Newsboys songs, making them even more powerful and meaningful.

Other tracks include "All Because Of This," "Spoken For," and "Go." These songs were mixed. Let's be honest, nobody likes techno, especially not with weak base beats. However, this is not recommended. This album is not just your typical pop music. "Newsboys Remixed" is straight from the heart and is the perfection addition to any looking for an experience that will leave them wanting more.

This album is a must-listen for anyone who loves Newsboys. It is a great showcase for the underrated artist, Mike Schaeffer, as well as works of their own. This album is a must-have for any Newsboys fan. If you haven't gotten a chance to listen to this album yet, I strongly recommend it. It will surely exceed your expectations.

The album is available on most major music retailers, including Amazon and iTunes. Make sure to check it out and see how Newsboys Remixed has learned to enjoy life.
Four soccer players stick together to keep Liberty on top

By Chris Hamby, reporter

A few years ago, there was a movement in the ACC that had coaches seeing the benefit of general manager in addition to their coaching duties. The thinking was that if Bill Powers saw that if he was going to be successful coaching he had to do the things that were deeping the team.

For Liberty's soccer coach, Jeff Alder, Wesleyan Christian School had been a one-up game ever. Wesleyan Christian, a small Christian school located in High Point, N.C., has supplied the Flames with four starters.

Senior goalkeeper, Patrick Heery, has started every game for each of Liberty's two matches. Midfielder Brently Kellum, has started 10 matches this season, and has 12 points (five goals and seven assists). Forward Fredman Brown, Darryl Roberts, has started five games and had two goals and a goal assist. Two of those goals (Heery, Kellum and Roberts) played with each other when Wesleyan Christian was in championship form and was ranked ninth in the country. In that state championship game, Wesleyan Christian was down a man and a goal when the opposing team had the ball. "It was nerve racking to see my goalkeeper," Heery said. "It was nerve racking to see my middle backs." Roberts continued. "He was probably the best player that we faced from Wes­leyan."

"You just have to keep your head in the game and lead the team," Heery added. "You don't want to see a goal scored, but you have to keep your head in the game and lead the team." Roberts added. "We are all thrown off. We were all thrown off by Wesleyan.

The Lady Flames volleyball team began its season coming from Wesleyan and has learned some comes from the same school as you and plays well," Kellum said. "It is nice for all the hard work, effort and energy pay off for them," Roberts said. "I am sure that some of those same feelings that we had with Wesleyan are coming over here at Liberty."

Flames backfield keeps defense guessing

By John Fend, sports editor

For the second time this season, Flames running back Deon Condon (So.) sat out campus last week, making way for one-game going (5-7) of the Flames' spread offense against Charleston Southern on Saturday. While Barnes officiated the team in making this season, the Flames' backfield is far from one-dimensional.

The Flames carry six running backs on their roster, two of whom, Sam Gooden (So.) and Lawrence Dixon (Sr.), have seen significant playing time and Eugene Goodman (Sr.) has practiced with the first-string defense with Barnes. "If one of us doesn't like a play we could cut it off and we wouldn't get a chance," Goodman said.

"We have four backs that I think we could start for any A-1 team in the country," Karcher added.

Coming out of high school each player was accepted as "The top guy," Barnes, from Ocoee, Ga., attended Irwin County County High School where he was the school all-time leading rusher, finishing his senior season with 5,200 career rushing yards, and four-year career with 5,200 career rushing yards. Condon, from Smithfield, Va., attended Liberty in high school in making his decision to attend and was named First Team All-Big South tournament during his senior year and was named First Team All-Big South tournament during his senior year and was named First Team All-Area.

Unlike the other three backs, Dixon is a redshirt sophomore who saw the 2002 season after missing his ACU during preseason training camp. However, all four backs have at least some playing time during their freshman seasons.

"Anything you can play as a freshman in any position you've got to be pretty good," Karcher said.

Of the four, Barnes not only played as a freshman, he was one of the team's main scorers. Despite an injury-shortened season, Barnes was named to Don Hansen's Football Gazette Honorable Mention All-American team and was Liberty's 2001 Offensive Most Valuable Player.

This season, Barnes has picked up right where he left off, while leading the team with 724 rushing yards; already expected by many last season's total. So why do the Flames need so many talented backs?

"When you're able to show different types of running games it can confuse the defense because they don't know what to expect. Most of the time you're not going to see a back, other times they'll have to bring the defense up if there's a ballplayer type of guy," Goodman said.

"The quality of Flames running attack is just like Goodman said; each back has a role and each is able to. Barnes at 5'11" and 200 pounds uses his lateral quickness to edge opponents and

Big South enhances TV schedule

While the University of Virginia's athletic department may be relying too much on ESPN for their game coverage, the Big South Conference has once again stepped up to the plate and has increased the TV package.

American head coaches. This percentage is lower than the NFL; two of them have African-American roots. There must be something inherent of the team. After all, what else would the fans of a professional sport be guilty of racism, especially when giving seven figure paychecks to those who make multimillion dollar salaries. It seems illogical, if not unreasonable, that there is not an issue with the number of athletes, minorities, and African-Americans being hired by NFL teams. Yet we must think critically. Do we as players, coaches, and fans have a responsibility to address this issue, especially if we believe that the NFL is one of the most powerful organizations in the country when it comes to affecting social issues including race?

The reason why the NFL is not an issue is because we believe the NFL is a business and not a social entity. The NFL is a business and as such, the NFL is not responsible for solving social problems. Yet, there are those who believe that the NFL is a social entity and that they are responsible for solving social problems. The NFL is a social entity because it is an organization that has the power and the resources to solve social problems. The NFL is a social entity because it has the power to influence public opinion and to shape public policy. The NFL is a social entity because it has the power to create jobs and to stimulate economic growth. The NFL is a social entity because it has the power to inspire and to entertain.

The NFL is not a social entity because it is a business. The NFL is a business because it is owned by a group of owners who are interested in making money. The NFL is a business because it is run by a team of executives who are interested in maximizing profit. The NFL is a business because it is a for-profit enterprise. The NFL is a business because it is not a non-profit organization. The NFL is a business because it is not a charity. The NFL is a business because it is not a government agency.

NFL—What Happened?

Athletes used to be warriors who fought the championship with every ounce of their being and left it all on the field. Now we are dealing with athletes who have to second guess themselves every move they make because the NFL has taken control of every aspect of their lives.

The NFL needs to realize that football is not just a business, it's a sport. The athletes who play are not just employees; they are the ones who make the sport real because an athlete's toughness was tested in the game and only the stars shined through. How many tough players with no fear exist in the NFL today? It stuns me to think all these premadanos get ballerinas with pads? Did line—
