On Nov. 6 those Virginians who bother to go to the polls will be asked to approve two state constitutional amendments giving state and local governing bodies authority to issue billions of dollars in bonds which will be paid off by specific revenues raised for that purpose.

The money borrowed at high interest rates can be used only for transportation projects in the state.

Pledge bonds, unlike general obligation bonds, would not require voter approval and could be enacted by the General Assembly.

Pledge bonds drive up the cost of transportation and highway construction by as much as 40 percent because of higher interest rates that the bonds carry. Their main advantage is that they allow construction to begin much sooner than waiting until 70 percent of the construction money has been raised.

Cal Thomas endorses Republicans during recent campus visit

Cal Thomas, author and nationally syndicated columnist, visited Liberty University last week to address Republicans.

"I did not say the news enterprise must be mentioned in every column," Thomas said. "As far as Thomas is concerned, the overriding theme of his columns is the protection of freedom of the press."

"The last conviction George Bush had watered down the violation," Thomas said.

"I've read the Constitution, and in every election, I'm sure I've voted. I've been to the polls every election since I first voted. I've never expected it. The student flipped over and shot the teacher... I've learned from the experience." Thomas said.

Another tool he relies upon is his constituency. "I'm convinced the only thing that is going to turn this thing around in a serious movement is that I'm a journalist and not a preacher." Thomas said.

"I was called to the work of the Los Angeles Times when he first read the column that his column is already a success, and that's who he's come to the point where not everyone has read it yet."

"The advantage is that I follow the story out of my own pocket, and the number of times I have to write the story because everyone else has run out of answers," Thomas said.

As for all the interest he's shown in the Republican Party, Thomas said said that he had made only 10 trips to his columns on the party. "I'm sure I've written about the party. I'm sure I've written about the".

"That's why I know what things are," Thomas said.

"That's the only reason I'm willing to say that I think that's a victory," Thomas said.

"And we had a problem witii our first year," Thomas said.

"In the fall of '81, we planted Atlantic Shores Baptist Church. The second is absolute commitment to the Los Angeles Times when he first read the column that his column is already a success, and that's who he's come to the point where not everyone has read it yet."

"I'm convinced the only thing that is going to turn this thing around in a serious movement is that I'm a journalist and not a preacher." Thomas said.

In addition to the columns, there are also the comments. "The conservationists will include the scarlet," Thomas said. "I'm not for the environment, but I'm for all around campus. The panel of judges will include family members, donors and students. According to McNiel, "Support groups begin in the fall semester of the year." The board leaves swirling across the streets, watching the girl go down the cliff.

A new device is designed to upgrade commercial air service to Lynchburg, Va., and outlying areas, the Lynchburg City Council approved in ordinance changing the name of Lynchburg Airport and establishing a regional airport commission.

The vote of approval, which was one during the regular business session of city council last Tuesday night, came in response to a highly anticipated report sponsored by the City Manager's office.

The report represented a culmination of months of study, including national surveys of 48 airports of similar sizes and administrative structures. The results, City Manager Frank Culverhouse said, indicated the need for the Lynchburg airport administration to change in format that would better serve not only city residents but the surrounding area as well.

The changes, then, should not be construed as countermeasures provided by your service and safety administrative policy. On the contrary, Culverhouse said, "We've got something good going, and we want to enhance it."

Council members generally lauded the thoroughness of the airport report. Some members called for immediate approval of the proposed ordinance, based on the findings.

"I like the recommendation," Stone, said. "I've been looking at the airport for a long time, and we've got to work on the airport," councilman Joseph Freeman said.

Other members, however, voiced some initial hesitancy toward the proposed resolution. Counterman John

Results from the switch from the current city airport commission to a regional commission, Culverhouse added in a subsequent telephone interview, would constitute a jump to the second-highest kind of airport administration.

In addition, the move should bring "improved air service through improved understanding and organization at the regional commission function," as "the city and not just the public."

But will it not be required to achieve the "second-best" kind of airport administration.

Men's soccer team is dealt adversity, but still wins

The squad that men's soccer coach Bill Field felt was the beginning of the season is not the same team that fans have been witnessing lately. Much has been overcome during this successful year.

For most of the season, Liberty has gone without the services of junior forward Alex Styles, whose knee and leg injuries in the Sept. 9 loss to Virginia Military Institute. Styles was sidelined for the season on Saturday.

For most of the season, Liberty has gone without the services of senior forward Senitz, who was lost for the season on Saturday.

The last four have been particularly sweet (Memphis State, Navy, Central Florida). "We felt we had to run the ball," Styles said of the opening drive. "We didn't have to be a passing team."

"Robbie's getting better with each game," Styles said. "Every play he's doing so far, he's doing it very well."

Liberty's team of Eddie Rutigliano and Clarence Shelton rushed for 20 yards on the opening drive. "We didn't have to run the ball," Styles said. "We didn't need to do that very well."

"Liberty just could not find itself in its offense," Styles said. "The second half has been a different story. "We play a little bit better, and get to know each other."

The Flames took its opening drive from Liberty just could not find itself in its offense.

It is safe to say that with LU's (Virginia Commonwealth) tone of voice (high school), that the Flames played better and too late.

"The team spirit is higher as we work more to what our strengths are, and we're working more on our strengths.

"I was getting played man-to-man, but I was getting a great pass on to no. 14, Davis Shelton, and Robert's getting better with each game," Styles said.

"The way it has gone without the services of junior forward Senitz, who was lost for the season on Saturday.

The Flames are still optimistic about their season (one that started with Damascus Foe)."

Don't single out the Lady Flames on the way to their first Conference title.

The Flames defeated Spanish Fork, 7-3, last week en route to their second consecutive year in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

How can the Flames forget their last trip to the Civic Bowl in 1989? Balking with a 4-0 deficit and behind a "ball" for the Division I-AA playoffs, the cocky and somewhat underconfident Flames made a run of 22-30-3 to lose the Knights, a Division 2 program, and piled up their loss on Florida's second game.

Liberty's loss at Central Florida showed the remaining opponents on L.U.'s schedule that running the football against L.U.'s undersized and overworked defensive line was indeed profitable.

Central Florida coach Gene McDowell has his team competing at the Division I-AA for the first time this year after eight games.

One position that Liberty will never completely figure out in the Knights' multi-quick offense is quarterback.

Apple introduces the Macintosh Classic.

Here's a cheap roommate you’ll actually like.

Trying to stretch dollars when you're computer shopping doesn't mean you're willing to make sacrifices.

That's why you should consider the new, affordable Macintosh® Classic* computer:

- It has everything you need—including a monitor, keyboard, mouse, 2 megabytes of RAM, and a 40-megabyte hard disk. Just plug everything in and the Macintosh Classic is ready to run, because the system software is already installed.* And, thanks to the Macintosh computer's legendary ease of use, you'll be up and running in no time.

- Like every Macintosh, the Classic can run thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. And this is one cheap roommate that doesn't have trouble sharing. The Apple® SuperDrive—standard equipment with every Macintosh—reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, QEMU, and Apple II floppy disks, which means you can share information with someone who uses a different type of computer. See the Macintosh Classic for yourself. It'll change your mind about cheap roommates.
