Senate seeks limited administration review

By CHARLES MALLORY
Champion Reporter

The Senate unanimously passed amendments Thursday that limit on-campus organizations of Intramural and Intramural Coed issues on limited and introduced first time bills that will be considered at the next session of the Senate.

The majority controversy of the meeting was that the Senate should include a clause that removed the amount of time the university can review legislation.

As previously ruled in Bills 17, the Senate now has the final say on limited time limit on legislation.

The proposed amendment will give administrators in the senate classes of combined two calendar weeks in order to

LYNCHBURG teen center offers alternative to streets

By LAURIE TEPVEAUGH

The wearing apparel (of the job) is pulling kids out of the pit of hell," Richard Ouimet, director and founder of Straight Street, said.

"Job centers" are popping up all over Lynchburg to find out what those young people might come to know Christ personally," Ouimet said. "Several job centers have opened two years ago by Ouimet and his wife Mimi. They moved to Lynchburg to "hang out" at the mall and Wards Road (the cruising areas) and uncovered his soul in the small way. But he started to think about this. If ever there was a time when God's people needed prayer, it is this time.

The purpose of Straight Street is to provide a safe environment for the Christian adults and other teens so that they might come to know Christ personally," Ouimet said. "Straight Street is a teen center located on Liggetts Road in Lynchburg.

"I keep coming back because every time I go I come back with a new understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make you stand on your feet," Ouimet said. "I can't get straight path out of my mind, and then I do a drive by on what the Lord was trying to say. When these kids Arrival was to get on the white path that lead to destruction and travel the straight and narrow path that lead to life. Then in Straight Street's name comes from two paid part-time employees and church volunteers. Carla Martin, a junior at E.C. Glass High School, said, "I work here because of my heart for the homeless."

"For a Community service assignment, I made a poster and a brochure that the community can see a story of activities from which to choose," Ouimet said. Outside, a beach volleyball court and basketball court add to the fun. Straight Street's mission is "to met the right to hear and to show the kids we sincerely care," said Ouimet. Does this philosophy work? Thousands of kids come to check out the center. Many teen center volunteers go up smoking and drinking, and many come to know the Lord as a result."

"I don't have any kind of crystal ball to ever be able to predict what they will do, but I believe it in stages," Ouimet said. "Together, we are working to make a difference in the lives of these kids."

"My job is to try and discern the truth," Johnston illustrated with a criminal case. "I don't have any kind of crystal ball to ever be able to predict what they will do, but I believe in stages," Ouimet said. "Together, we are working to make a difference in the lives of these kids."

Student complaining goes beyond reason

Since Liberty was founded 20 years ago, students and faculty have constantly been undergoing the process of coping with problems from mud to overcrowding, yet they still manage to adjust to a changing university. Today students still complain, even though the present conditions are much better than when the school started.

Some inconveniences do exist and tend to grow as the school grows larger. Probably one of the hardest adjustments to make is the number of people that gather to eat in the cafeteria. It really can be frustrating to wait so long for food that one would expect the property of The Champion asks that all letters be typed.

If you are correct in stating that several bills have been brought to the Senate? Why don't you check your facts and write the Liberty Flame Resolution?

Editor's Note: The Editorial Board expresses its regret that an anonymous writer who accused the editorial board of carelessness was not development of subject matter that has no control over the bills; the senate has no control over those bills. Thank you.

Editor: I'm writing this letter in response to your recent attack on the student staff. It seems to me you're still writing the school newspaper about this, because I would figure that a student newspaper would want to focus on those problems.

One day we may have that new cafeteria, and then students will just find a new problem to gripe about. Until that day comes, let's have patience and realize that there might be a new problem to run into.

Don't give Liberty a bad name in the neighborhood. If students actually thought of what they complain about, they would find that it is not really such a big deal after all.

The Little Foxes' presents moral question

By ANITA WELLS
Special to The Champion

Fifty years after its original produc- tion at the New York City, Lillian Hellman’s play “The Little Foxes” continues to be performed and enjoyed by audiences for its originality, vitality and dramatic force. This play, which was first produced in 1939, is a contemporary with the works of Tennessee Williams and is considered a classic of American theater. It is set in the South during the Great Depression and deals with themes of greed and corruption. The play is set in the summer of 1931, and is a story of the family of the Hubbards, a family of English bankers who have come to the United States to make their fortune through the exploitation of the American South. The play is a powerful commentary on the moral and ethical issues of the time, and remains relevant today. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of American theater and the social and political issues of the time.

The Central Florida football team has made a habit of rallying from second-half deficits, and the Knights did it again Saturday against Florida Atlantic. "We just have the heart to come back," said Lou Graham, the Knights' quarterback. "It's just a reason to breathe a sigh of relief after LU's 21-point lead in the first quarter before mounting a second-half comeback. Central Florida had been the defensive team, and the Knights found themselves down 10-9 with only 100 yards and three touchdowns.

Don't let the final score fool you, though. The Knights still passed for 390 yards and two touchdowns. They also had 264 yards rushing.

Defensively, the Knights were just as good as their offense, allowing only 264 total yards. The Flames come into the third game for a 6-2 Liberty bulge.

"It's not just a social network; our outreaches are doing all sorts of stuff," Hall said. "This is how they're helping to promote the message." The Flames' running back Dwayne Carswell struggles to break away from the defense of the Flames. "Our strategy after the half was to bring it back and not give up," Hall said. "We just kept pushing and playing hard." The Flames spotted George Mason 10-7 when the Flames scored on a 1-yard run by English after a blocked punt and recovered on the 1-yard line with seven seconds left.

Men's basketball win

The Liberty University men's basketball team advanced against the Radford Highlanders, 87-75, Saturday night in the Vines Center.

This was the Flames' first exhibition game this season and proved to be a good one as the team had a lot of experience in the past.

The Flames had the lead throughout the game.

For the game, the Flames shot 41.4 percent from the field and hit five of 15 three-point attempts.

Parrish, Flournoy and Beam each pulled down six rebounds to lead the Flames.

Bream back in town

LU Flames basketball standout Thomas Bream was on campus Nov. 2 and through Nov. 6 for a visit.

Bream is currently training to play basketball in the Olympics. He said that right now she is the number three golfer and will probably make the 1996 Olympics unless she can beat out the number-three golfer to go to the Games.

She is working in LaGrange, Ohio, in the gym for more intensive workouts.

Bream plans to return to Liberty in the fall of 1995 for her final year playing women's basketball and to finish her degree.
