OBAMA CAMP SWINGS INTO LYNCHBURG
Senior Obama addresses full auditorium at E.C. Glass High School

With Obama's arrival in the eastern part of the country, it is clear that the campaign is beginning to shift its focus to key states. The new policy does not only apply to students but to faculty and staff as well.

Parker also thinks students will take leadership with a great sense of responsibility for helping his campaign. He is most proud of. I'm (also) very honored, being the president of Carol Goisman. I have invested a lot of years of my life in every way possible for the chancellor to lead this university.

WHAT ACCOMPLISHMENT OR ROLE ARE YOU MOST PROUD OF?
Obama: Confining my trip to the mountains. Being the husband of Carole Goisman in the recent past was great. It was a new opportunity for me to see the world from a different perspective. The event of my life is this university. And every day wake up with great sense of having the ability to help in every way possible for the chancellor to lead this university.

WHAT DO YOU ENJOY ABOUT WORKING FOR JERRY J.
Obama: It is very similar to the way I worked for Sen. Frank L. J. I enjoy working on those projects that are most important to the chancellor and now I get to do that. The chancellor is as important as for me to continue with the chapters, as he needs.

The Lynchburg Inn: A break from tradition

Every new year brings big changes at Liberty, and fall 2008 is no different with the opening of The Lynchburg Inn.

The much-needed facelift for Liberty's rental system has been on the table for many years. However, it began only last year as a part of the construction project. All new parking spaces for students at The Schilling Center, thus adding a connection to the back of 300 spots on main campus, according to Beaumont.

The third floor of DeMoss Hall, one of Liberty's numerous construction projects throughout the campus, is finished and ready for the fall semester. A grand total of 113,000 square feet of space is now open for faculty and student use.

Liberty contracted Custom Structures to design the third floor. Once the layout design was completed, 15 different contractors were hired to build and install all the necessary functions for the project. Construction for the floor began on May 1, 2008, after the spring semester had come to a close and a majority of the students had left. The entire project took three months to complete and cost $4.7 million, according to Bill Maitland, the planning coordinator for the project.

“From the start date to the finish, the coordination and the contractor installations were according to the project schedule without any major difficulties,” Maitland said.

Proper planning and preparation allowed the project to be completed without any complications, just in time for the fall. Staying on time was the number one priority, and Liberty made sure the third floor was equipped with the finest technology available.

Four separate classrooms have been outfitted with computers for student use during classes - two PC labs and two Mac labs. While the PCs are essentially the same, the Macs, which were purchased this year, are tops of the line according to ILC personnel. Designed specifically for the use of media classes, they are capable of completing many arduous tasks that would bog down other computers.

The second floor computer lab is a common and very noisy, clearly not the best conditions for studying. The third floor computer lab was designed to create a more proper studying environment and to alleviate the traffic domestic. Both of these goals have been accomplished.

"I was happy for the expansion due to the noise underclassmen," said junior Cordia Lewis. "Anybody who is serious about studying should be the main reason for anyone visiting the third floor. A few followed the door, the hand was kicked and four men entered the home. According to a News and Az article by Dave Thompson entitled, "Rare home invasion occurs in Campbell County," this incident took place just south of Lynchburg, off of U.S. 221 - a highway quite familiar to those attending Liberty. The room was searched, emptied and areas they proceeded the home, putting their guns at the occupants. They proceeded the door to the house open for the next 15 minutes in search of valuables. We found himself in that exact position. An article in an article posted on WISN.com, the Ramsey family of Milwaukee went in the middle of the night to find Kim Protsak, 29, in his home. When Protsak refused to leave, Michael Rainiero proceeded to sue the homeowner for using "excessive force," ABC Milwaukee reported. Rainiero's lawyer defended his client's actions, saying, "The door was slammed in his face when an intruder came into his home and put his life, his wife's life, and his two kids' lives in jeopardy." Virginia lawmakers are also faced with the issue of self-defense in the home. In February of 2006, according to a WTVD-16 News article by stating, "This is a bill that would allow Virginia residents to exercise deadly force when faced with intruders in their homes. Robert Bushnell, prosecutor for Henry County, strongly opposed that bill in the WTOP News article by stating, "This bill is a license to kill." Bushnell brings up a good point. If we allowed such a law to pass, it would lead to a 'shame first, ask questions later mentality. Such a bill could lead to unnecessary bloodshed. However, the laws of physics demand that for every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction. If an individual enters someone's home by force, they should expect to be met with equal force. A home is a haven for one's family, forever and friendship. The person prepared to threaten these things should also be ready to repost the course actions.

God's Green Earth: Eco Trends

Elizabeth German

ONLINE REPORTER

Turn on the television, go grocery shopping, or know the treats and one thing is clear: America is going green. The idea of global warming and the high cost of all that comes with it are definitely two reasons this trend is gaining momentum. This new wave can be seen throughout the media. The Planet Green network is a television station with programming that includes great recipes and tips to shop and live more environmentally. Just locally, a recent installment of Lynchburg Living was called the "Green Issue." In addition, organic foods are growing in popularity. Vegetarian and vegan options are as well, with celebrity spokespersons such as Alicia Silverstone. When many people hear the word "environmental" logically those not located in the northeast or west coast they often roll their eyes. The first words that may come mind are方面 environmental, vegan-baiting,道德back vegeating, peace-loving, tree-hugging freaks who picket, protest and smell funny. I admit, I used to have same impression until I really saw that they really like throwing a bottle in the right direction. Elizabeth German at ejgarm@liberty.edu

Beneath the Georgia-Russia conflict

Tony Stimson
OPINION REPORTER

In today's society, it is important to stay informed of both worldwide and local events. The recent conflict between Georgia and Russia has caused many to reach for a map, and it has international ramifications.

Dr. Stephen Bowers from Liberty's Helms School of Government is quite familiar with the region. He has spent years in Georgia, located south of Russia, between the Caspian Sea and Black Sea. During his time there, Bowers has developed close relationships with officials in the Georgian Ministry of defense.

A major concern is the petroleum pipeline that runs from Azerbajan through Georgia to the Black Sea. Bowers says, "This is the only petroleum pipeline not controlled by Russia or the Middle East." After Soviet Arabia, Russia is the number two supplier of petroleum in the world. Bowers foresees the current conflict having a major impact on the supply of petroleum and may cause gas prices to rise yet again.

What originally sparked this conflict was a region in Georgia called South Ossetia, whose inhabitants wanted to gain independence from Georgia and to join North Ossetia in the Russian Federation. Georgia had granted them autonomy, but the South Ossetian's had abused this right with mass smuggling operations. According to Bowers, the Ossetians were encouraged by the Russians to go into regions of Georgia and cause chaos. His sources from Georgia said the Ossetians began stealing cars and even kidnaping young women.

Georgia decided it was time to exercise power to regain control of the region, thus acting as Russia was hoping, and providing an opportunity for Russia to invade and attempt to overthrow the Georgian government. Russia's invasion came as little surprise. Brian Whitmore, who writes for the Eurasia Insight, stated, "Less than one month before Russia's armed forces entered Georgia on August 8, they held massive military training exercises in the North Caucasus involving 8,000 servicemen and 700 pieces of military hardware."

In another article, Deborah Todd from National Public Radio reported, "Georgia's President Mikheil Saakashvili said Russia had been amassing troops on the border for months and used Georgia's efforts to retake control of the region as an excuse to invade."

Whitmore additionally stated, "Military analyst Pavel Felgenhufer says the aim, from the start, was to overthrow Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili and his pro-Western government." Bowers has strong reason to believe that this is true. He says that "Russia is trying to establish its empire and regain territory once owned during the reign of the Soviet Union." If this is true, and Russia is truly looking to re-establish the Soviet Union, a possible cold war could be imminent.

FLAMES

By William Armstrong

The Liberty Flames football team kicks off into the 2008-2009 season competing against our rival team with 14 wins against 1 loss. Another important aspect of the Flames' season is their enthusiasm and leadership.

The game began with a scoreless first quarter, both teams showing a strong defense in the opening kickoff. In the second quarter, the Flames put up a touchdown, which was quickly followed by an interception by their quarterback. The Flames continued their momentum in the third quarter, scoring two more touchdowns and maintaining their lead. The fourth quarter saw the Flames adding another field goal to their total, securing the victory with a final score of 28-10. The Flames' defense was outstanding throughout the game, holding the opposing team to just 10 points. The offense was equally impressive, scoring four touchdowns and a field goal.

CRUSADERS

Out of Tigerville, SC, the North Greenville Crusaders opened their season with a 34-0 victory over the University of Mount Olive. The first quarter was scoreless, but the Crusaders took over in the second quarter, scoring 14 points and then adding another 20 points in the third quarter. The defense was dominant, holding the Mount Olive offense to just two touchdowns. The Crusaders face a tough schedule in the upcoming season, and will need to improve their defense to compete with the top teams in the conference. The season opener is scheduled for Friday, August 29, against the University of Mount Olive.

Lady Flames unable to catch the Lancers, fall 2-0

Cell's coaching debut spoiled by Oliver's offensive breakout

By Adam Palmer

With new head coach Jessica Celi making her debut in the season opener, the Lady Flames fell to the University of Lynchburg, losing 2-0. The Flames were unable to score despite having several opportunities, including a penalty kick in the first half. The Lancers defense was solid, allowing no goals despite the Lady Flames' offensive efforts.

In the second half, the Lady Flames continued to press for a goal, but were unable to pierce the Lancers' defense. The game ended with the Lady Flames still searching for their first win of the season. Coach Celi's debut was a tough one, but the team's hard work and determination will be key to their success in the upcoming season.
Pinder and Co. gear up for 2008 volleyball season

In the early minutes of the second half, Oliver found the back of the net, giving Longwood a 2-0 advantage. The lady flames offense kicked it into high gear, as seniors Malkey Noff and Ashley Steele each had their share of goal-scoring opportunities. The defense was able to close out the deficit, but neither of their shots found their marks and Longwood hung on for a 2-0 victory.

The Lady Flames play the University of Virginia Lady Cavaliers on Friday at 7 p.m.
