On-Campus debate: Debaters tackle term limitation with W & L

By BEN LAFROMBOIS

Champion Reporter

Term limitation has become a national issue in the past few months.

"Term limitation is being talked about in a lot of states, and something a few states have adopted," Hampton said. "It's in a current issue and the recent election demonstrated the importance of the issue."

"It is a 3 to 1 split in the House with 98 percent of incumbents running for re-election," O'Donnell added.

Time will be given between the opening speeches and the rebuttals for an audience question and answer period. Members of the debate co-director, said.

Courtney McNair, associate debate co-director, said. "The issue of this debate is that the term limitation proposal is too restrictive." The six-month time limit for renewal of the term would allow the incumbent to run for re-election.

Kimblll to take Christ to 20 state universities

Contemporary Christian music singer and songwriter Kim Hill could be considered a maverick in the Christian music field; despite her new-comer status, she has definite ideas about what she wants for her music career in the United States.

Hill's concert at the Liberty Fieldhouse, was in response to last week's senate story concerning money being lost through the Business Office as well as repairmen to knock on the door before they enter a dorm room. If no-one is in the dorm room, the repairmen will be requested to find the dorm room occupant before they can enter.

The DeMoss Hall ticket window is now presenting tickets for seven concerts.

Legislators sacrifice leadership to embrace political rhetoric

By BRANDI BARNUM

The American politicians of the 1700s were definitely more aligned to their constituents than are today's politicians. In fact, many of them died fighting for their beliefs.

Politicians today are often seen as hucksters fighting for their special interest groups and other "pressing" issues to connote with their constituents.

It seems as if the fervor and enthusiasm for the country today is one that is less fervent and less forthcoming than it was in the 1700s. This may not seem entirely accurate, but one can argue that politics today is more polished and less real.

Everyone has heard horror stories about the corruption and dishonesty of today's politicians. This may be true, but it is also not entirely accurate, as many politicians are not actually as corrupt as they seem.

Many great statesmen of the past, such as Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and John Locke, made many great sacrifices for the growth and prosperity of their country.

In fairness, however, not all politicians of today are corrupt and dishonest. There are a few politicians who have honest hearts and honest intentions, such as the newly-elected Caroline Summer, Jesse Holme.

How about those original jokes, anyway? A typical episode consists of MacGyver trying to rescue some girl in Central American country.

During his quest, he is captured by the bad guys, who make his life as difficult as possible. MacGyver uses his knowledge of science and technology to escape from the bad guys and to use his gadgets as weapons.

One show that I think the first time I watched "MacGyver" I was "sucked in," any "type of government," I realized that the main character is a tough, yet intelligent man who is always on the lookout for new inventions.

On the same week that "MacGyver" was aired, the U.S. Congress voted to raise taxes by almost $300 billion. Cannot we see how some of my ancestors and friends are founded on the principles of traditional Christian beliefs.

Perhaps more important than becoming involved with politics is to understand the moral convictions of those in leadership positions would be a little more convincing.

Do something today that makes you feel like you are making a difference. Whether it is volunteering at a local shelter or simply for yourself or someone you care about.

It will be a test to see where you stand when you next find yourself in a situation where you are the only one who can make a difference.
