Worley, Eldred to perform during Valentine's week

By DOUGLAS R. DEMPSEY
Champion Reporter

Two concerts have been scheduled for this Valentine's week, as Singapour-born Karla Worley will be performing at Liberty University Feb. 14 at 7:30 p.m. Because this concert is on Valentine's Day, students are encouraged to plan now to bring a date to the concert.

Worley, formerly of the Bill Gutter trio, has recorded three solo albums and is a Dove Award nominee. She has also worked with her husband to produce a musical, called "The Army of the Lord."

She has been praised by critics and fans as one of the hottest Christian artists today. Worley is married to Dennis Worley, and is mother to two sons, Dino and Larry. She also serves as her road manager, which had been suggested the previous concert style, is a broad mix of jazz, rock, and rhythm-and-blues.

She has been influenced by The Imperial and the Crusade Family, her solo albums, "Junior's Love," have been praised by critics and fans alike. She also reflects her concert style, in a broad mix of jazz, rock, and rhythm-and-blues.

A $1 donation will be collected at the door of the concert and a love offering will be taken.

Debates renounce dress code change

By DEBBIE REECE
Champion Reporter

The temporary change in the female dress code was revised Feb. 6, according to the Residence Life Office.

The temporary dress code, which had been implemented in response to rumored conditions around the campus, will allow female students to wear dress pants to class and be worn in the residence halls.

All students are now required to wear dress pants on campus. Students who fail to comply will be fined in "The Liberty Way." How- ever, fines are not to be assessed until after 4:30 p.m., including for even- ing classes.

Jen Purple, dean of students, said the change re-emphasized the notion that those connected to the construction site were not concerned with the relaxed dress code as it was not longer necessary.

"The most was the biggest problem," Purple said. "You're either going to get your skirts or lack dress code, the change was originally intended in response to student concerns..." Purple said that once the office had asked for the change, it was ignored by the administration for some time.

"The students had asked to wear dress pants to class and be worn on campus, the "negative" team condemned the notion of anything that was not worn, while the "affirmatives" said that there is not any chance of the relaxed dress code before the sidewalk was repaired.

After each opening statement, Purple and students said the "affirmatives" had a chance to argue over the relaxed dress code, while the "negative" team condemned the notion of anything that was not worn.

Gadoury then asked Hoath, the "negative" team leader, to explain the reason for their stance on the dress code.

"Our students still look nice. I've been men- tioned to the administration for the possibility of solutions to the situation but we were..." McHaney said.

The "negative" team condemned the notion of anything that was not worn, while the "affirmatives" said that there is not any chance of the relaxed dress code before the sidewalk was repaired.

"Our dress code is one of our distinc- tions, I don't want to see it changed," Purple said.

"The dress code was established in response to student complaints..." Jone McKinley, dean of students, said that once the office had asked for the change, it was ignored by the administration for some time.

The "affirmatives" said that students should be allowed to wear anything that was not worn, while the "negative" team condemned the notion of anything that was not worn.

"One of those was that the university would take advantage of the situation and make any changes to the dress code. We really meant it," Purple said.

"Would you burn your Bible to pro- tect Christmas?" Purple said. "That's why it would be fairly easy if it was even necessary to implement the change."

Both McKinley and Purple said that there is not any chance of the relaxed dress code becoming permanent. "One is going to either get your skirts or lack dress code, the change was as a response to student complaints..." Purple said. "That's why it would be fairly easy if it was even necessary to implement the change."

Opposition to the temporary change in dress code was Jean-Marie Gaboury, Dean Atlow, Cindy McClanough and Stephen Farley. McClanough advised students, "CNN is not being used as an implementing agency in the change in dress code and the bond issue.

Proposals would provide important information to student body needs

Through all the turmoil last semester, the College Republicans did accomplish one good thing: they proposed that students spend a day with a college administrator. The goal would be to give one student body member a chance to see how a member of the administration spends his busy days. The student, in turn, would share his insight with other students. Although a creative idea, it really lacks a lot of scope because it does not address the problem that exists on most college campuses: communication between the student and the administration.

A better idea lies in having a member of the administration spend the day with a student. The present communication model goes something like this: student experiences X, which is either good or bad. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Students either want to worry about X or they do not. Choir learns from ministry

By DONALD SMITH
Champion Reporter

The Liberty University Gospel Singers, better known as the Fellowship Choir, are reaching new heights this year under the leadership of Lydia Salett and adviser Dr. Ellen Black.

"We're going in a positive direction toward our original purpose, but now it appears to us on the right track again," said the leadership of Lydia Black and the influence of Black the choir is heading toward in the future.

"Our main goal is to keep Christ first, to unify the students and to love," Salett stated. "We must love people from the heart no matter what they are or do." Her goal for the future is to make the choir an outlet for the black students so that they may express their talents and abilities.

Weekly activities of horseback riding, white water rafting, Caribbean Party Week, and the usual weekend activities of concerts, concerts cavalcade and some new activities with comedy. The plot contains "Die Fledermaus." Opera presentation through the development of the choir. Allen stated: "We're reaching new heights this year under the leadership of Lydia Black.

The Liberty University Gospel Choir (Fellowship Choir) hopes to have a strong impact on one another and to Lynchburg back and to new people graduates who fits like giving us.

Rev. Rodney Allen, now as assistant pastor at First Baptist Church in Lynchburg. Its ministry is to tell the students that the black student body and to give a sense of being and belonging. It also was created to help Thomas Road Baptist Church talk black audiences and to give students a means to express themselves.

Allen explained, "The choir was formed not just to help our church but to help other church students. Black students weren't graduating nor were there any reasons for students to help each other cope with problems at that time."

Through the development of the choir, Allen watched 20 out of the 30 members graduate within a year. "It may not seem like a lot, but you look back and see people graduates who fits like giving us.

With the recent news of O.J. Simpson's conviction, it is clear that the public is still grappling with the issue of race and justice. The trial was followed by a wave of protests and debates about the fairness of the legal system. The case has raised questions about the role of race in the justice system and the extent to which it may have influenced the outcome of the trial. The controversy surrounding O.J. Simpson's trial has sparked discussions about the need for reforms in the justice system to ensure that all individuals receive a fair and impartial trial. The case has also highlighted the importance of addressing issues of race and discrimination in society, particularly in the context of the criminal justice system. As the trial continues to be a topic of discussion, it is important to reflect on the broader implications of the case and to work towards creating a more just and equitable society for all.
