Fields resigns to pursue ministry

By DAWN K. LOONEY

After being with Liberty University for 18 years, Dr. Dennis Fields said that the university has brought him significant growth. Fields plans to retire in June. "I knew even then that God had called me into this," he said.

"I was given numerous opportunities so far before I came here. I never thought of myself as a preacher, but God has just been handing me a job to do so many spiritually and totally dependent on Him. I just came to a point in my life spiritually that I said, 'Hey, I can do Dennis Fields doing what Dennis Fields can do?'" he said. "It's time for me to totally depend on God." And just came to the conclusion that I need to start depending totally on God," he continued.

Upon his resignation, Fields said he will have more personal time to pursue ministry as a layman for 10 or 11 years. "I plan to do a little bit of preaching engagements to satisfy this ministry," he said. "I've got numerous preaching engagements to satisfy — just visit some places that we haven't had the time to in the past few years." Looking back on his time at LU, Fields said that the university has had a positive influence on his family. "The influence of the university as a whole has been a family-wide influence because my wife is a graduate of Liberty, my son and his girlfriend are a daughter of Liberty this May," he said. "So it's been a real personal growth situation for all of us," he said.

Dr. Fields also expressed appreciation for the opportunities that were made for the university has brought him. He said: "Personally, it's been a growing experience for me. A local church has been open to me to predicant, and help the church in Dr. Faithful. Where I worked there I was on the board of directors. You know, you've got a great staff and a great influence there."

Besides professional opportunities, Fields also experienced spiritual growth during his tenure at Liberty. "It's been an opportunity to grow spiritually. It's been an opportunity to evaluate and re-evaluate my personal goals and values when the years — my purpose in life, and that's a constant, ongoing evaluation," he said.

"The event that Fields will remember most will be conducting the funeral of Kevin Calloway, former Liberty Student who was killed in a plane crash in 1989. "We knew him in class," he said. "We were in the aviation program. During that funeral, it was a highlight in my life, but at the same time a great burden. I made a mistake that the students here don't turn a page."

SACS to hand down decision

By JEFFREY A. COTA

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) will meet with university officials to hand down final decision of the Liberty University School of Life Long Learning (ULSLLL) accreditation review Dec. 4 in New Orleans. SACS will present a report to the SACS Committee on Accreditation and Review on Dec. 4, outlining the changes made by Liberty that were mandated in order to ULSSLL to be removed from probation, the SACS General Assembly will then vote with university officials to accept or not accept the recommended plan. The SACS Assembly members are expected to meet and re-evaluate the guidelines.

The team's top eight tournaments are considered in the rankings. Liberty accumulated 66 points over seven tournaments this year which is more than any other school in any tournament this year.

"The university has brought him to me. Liberty has been a highlight in one way, but at the same time, it's a highlight in another," Stewart said.

"LUSLLL; Dr. Ellen Black, director of Planning, Research and Development, and Dr. Dan Caven, LUSLLL administrator, are expected to meet and re-evaluate the guidelines.

Dr. Dennis Fields, Vice president for administrative relations, was selected for the 1996 Who's Who in Religion and Who's Who in the South. Always come from saved situations. They don't all come from strong Christian backgrounds or strong churches," he said.

"I plan to do a little bit of preaching engagements to satisfy this ministry as a layman for 10 or 11 years," he said. "I've got numerous preaching engagements to satisfy — just visit some places that we haven't had the time to in the past few years."

Band members honored

By ABRAM PAFFORD

Liberty University band honored its 10 graduating seniors at the Liberty University vs. Kutztown football game on Nov. 16.

"We were very pleased with what the band has accomplished during this final year," said Carl. "They were all very dedicated, and they put in their best effort every day." Carl mentioned the overall attitude of the band members as being one factor that contributed to the success of the band.

"We had great leaders behind the band," said Carl. "Also, we would like to try for a trip to perform in the NFL next season."

City's dropout rate improves

By DEBBIE REECE

The Lynchburg School Board has seen its dropout rate, accreditation and capital improvements during its meeting Nov. 19.

Lynchburg city schools continued to reduce the dropout rate, for which the city is accredited by SACS (the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools). The dropout rate was 2.6 percent in 1990-91.

"We are very proud of our dropout rate," said Carl. "The percentage has been steadily decreasing, which is a good sign." Carl explained that the city schools have improved their efforts to keep students in school.

"This year's number hasn't been released," said Carl. "But the number of students who have enrolled in the schools has increased, which is a good sign."

Accreditation of Schools

On capital improvements, Superintendent Williams reported that almost 2 million dollars has been spent this year on repairs to city schools. He also mentioned that the board had approved the 1992-93 budget plan.

"We have made a great start," said Carl. "Also, we would like to try for a trip to perform in the NFL next season."

Carron said that the accreditation status is restored once a year and maintained every 10 years.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The American Civil Liberties Union is challenging a Pennsylvania law that women under 18 must obtain their parents' permission to obtain an abortion. The ACLU has asked the justices to decide whether the Pennsylvania law is constitutional, and if not, to overturn it.

Pennsylvania's law, which would take effect Jan. 1, requires that a woman under 18 obtain the written consent of both parents in order to get an abortion. The ACLU filed the suit in U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania.

The ACLU argues that the law is unconstitutional because it violates a woman's right to privacy and her First Amendment rights.

The ACLU contends that the law is an unconstitutional infringement of a woman's right to privacy, and that it violates the First Amendment rights of women and their doctors.

The ACLU is seeking a preliminary injunction to stop the implementation of the law, and a permanent injunction to enjoin its enforcement.

The ACLU's lawyer, Michael Kestenbaum, said: "We believe that the Pennsylvania law is unconstitutional because it violates a woman's right to privacy and her First Amendment rights."

churches. Besides the obvious barrier, some churches have very strict rules about the church. For instance, in some churches, the choir director may be the only one permitted to speak in a microphone during church services. This rule is designed to ensure that the church's message is conveyed clearly and effectively, and to prevent unnecessary distractions. Additionally, some churches have rules about attire, such as requiring all members to wear conservative clothing during services. However, it is important to remember that these rules are there to promote a sense of community and respect, and not to limit individual expression or creativity. Ultimately, it is up to each church to decide what rules they will have in place, and it is up to each individual to respect those rules if they choose to attend the church. It is important to communicate with the church leadership about any concerns or questions you may have regarding their rules, so that they can address them appropriately. The church is a place where people come together to worship and grow in their faith, and it is important to create an environment that is welcoming and inclusive for all.
Lu fans need to be more supportive

There is a growing problem in college basketball that needs to be addressed before it becomes even worse. This problem is the lack of support for our sports teams.

One example of this problem is the attendance at our basketball games. Attendance at basketball games has declined significantly in recent years. The reasons for this decline include overcrowding, poor facilities, and a general lack of enthusiasm for the sport.

Another problem is the limited exposure of our athletes. College athletes are often unable to gain the necessary attention from the media, which is crucial for their development. This lack of exposure can hinder their chances of securing scholarships or playing in professional leagues.

In conclusion, we need to address these problems and support our sports teams. Only then will we be able to ensure the continued success of our athletes and the overall prosperity of our campus.

The Liberty University men's basketball team plans to improve and mature as a whole during the inaugural season in the Big South Conference.

Last season, the Flames finished 15-14, but with a 5-9 record in the conference. The season ended on a sour note after falling in the conference tournament to South Carolina. The year before that, the team suffered a 17-15 record and were unable to make it to the conference tournament.

This year, the addition of Liberty to the Big South Conference has given the Flames a more competitive level as they take on a new challenge.

In order for LU to be successful, they must live up to their hype. Their coach, Bill Meyer, says, "The biggest area that the Flames must improve is keeping the turnovers down. We have to cut down on our turnovers for the entire season. I want to see that we stay focused and compete in the Big South. I want to see that we stay focused and compete in the Big South. I want to see that we stay focused and compete in the Big South. I want to see that we stay focused and compete in the Big South.

They have learned from last year's mistakes and are looking forward to a winning season. They are ready to take on the challenge of the Big South Conference and show that they have improved.

The Flames hope to have their best season ever and be a strong force in the conference. They are ready to compete in the Big South and make a name for themselves in Division I basketball.

Toomer's highlights include being named All-State and All-District. He earned Alaska's Player of the Year and played in the Junior All-American Games.

The Flames hope to have a more balanced attack this year. Their team will not try to rely on one player. They plan to use their strengths to their advantage and compete in the Big South.

The Flames' bench is a lot better this year than last year. They have added some new faces and improved their bench in order to keep the starters from becoming too tired.

The Flames believe that they have a lot more talent on the team this year than last year. They are looking forward to a successful season and are ready to compete in the Big South Conference.

Women's basketball aims high

Eleven Flames have experienced unexpected adversity, some women players are proving themselves not just on the court, and even more are helping themselves and the team in ways that surround this team of焚烧, determined athletes: the Liberty University women's basketball team.

Serving in a winning season, head coach Reeves is excited about the team's prospects, regarding the numerous injuries the team has acquired during the season.

"We've been in season for a month and a month in the season, but I'd rather have them now than at the beginning of the season," Reeves said. "They're doing fine, but they are still learning the game."

Center promotes 'Todyland Spectacular'

By DANIELLE PETERS

Center, an outreach ministry of Thomas Road Baptist Church (TRBC) and director of the Good Samaritan Center, said.

"This is one of our biggest projects. It's the highlight of the year for the families we minister to. They depend upon us for support at Christmas," Cordle said.

"We try to help people who attend Christmas and when they might have felt out of place at Thomas Road."

"I think that advertising has a tremendous impact on sales this year? I asked.

"The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles movie is still affecting toy sales. One major at LU. He will graduate in May 1992.

"Another special event being organized by SGA is a Christmas party for a community foster and orphaned children. Toy companies spend a great deal of money on Saturday morning, recruiting staff and other costs, dressing up a toy and playing games. The food and canvas are being donated by local businesses that want to promote business with community affairs.

"It's an excellent way to give these kids a homecoming experience. It's a marvellous opportunity to give our students and others to kids. Toy company's events are always great attention. They have great ideas and a lot of fun," Cordle said.

"We bring the whole concept to Candler's Station, said. (Barbies sure have gone up in price since I was a kid.)

"And what toys are hottest this season? It's a mystery," Cordle said.
