BRINGING THE JOY TO LIFE — The spirit of Christmas comes to life on the stage of Thomas Road Baptist Church during the opening performance of the Living Christmas Tree, a musical extravaganza celebrating the birth of Christ.

By JASON INGRAM

Thousands of Liberty students filled the seats at Thomas Road Baptist Church last Thursday night to witness the opening production of "The Living Christmas Tree."

The inaugural showing, which was free to LU stu­dents, was one of a record 13 presentations to be host­ed by TRBC this December. More than 600 people took part in the two-hour production, now in its 26th year.

This year's musical, set around the story of the Cen­tury, is entitled "Three Came for Dinner." It follows the fate of four orphaned children in their search for homes of their own. Along the way, the other charac­ters in the story explain to them that God wants to be their Father.

Woven into the fabric of the story were 30 songs per­formed by TRBC and Liberty regulars such as Doug Obaigbcna, Kendra Coker, Bobbi Hines, Beverly Lowery, Dr. Wayne Kempton, Patricia Carmel, the Martin Singers, the Sounds of Liberty and the Thomas Road Choir in the guise of the gigantic tree, which was pow­ered by more than 80,000 lights.

The music featured a variety of styles and perfor­mances, with yuletide standards such as "White Christmas" and "O Holy Night," sharing time with renditions of Michael W. Smith's "Swimming" and a live Christmas hit "Seasons." A special orchestra and the Spirit of the Mountains marching band also contributed to part, presenting several sentimental numbers — including presenting the drama for "The Little Drummer Boy.""In keeping with tradition, Liberty alumnus Michael Tate told Mullaney made an appearance, wallowing前行 through speed-up versions of "Joy to the World," "Amen" and "Shine, O' Holy Night." Though he's a stranger to the stage, Tate admitted that he was a little nervous about the opening show.

"My first night of practice was pretty rough," Tate said. "But I thought the evening went smoothly, con­sidering it was the first night."

Open dorms beckon students

By JASON ROSE

Dormitory rooms and halls were decked out in holiday style as hundreds of students swarmed into dorms that they normally couldn’t get close to. The fall commuter dorms were filled, Monday, Dec. 2 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Open Dorm Night is usually held on a Thursday, but this year Dean of Student Life Michael Stewart scheduled the event for Monday because it was the busiest vacation planning period.

The event was the first one of its kind for the Liberty Champion.

Many students were all out for the occasion, decorating hallways, lights and even cardboard hearts. Holiday cheer pervaded the Christmas merriment as well.

Students thoroughly enjoyed the bi-annual outing. "There’s been anything this good since dead三峡," said Dave Woodell. Mostly Roth agreed dorms were open but said it should happen more often.

"If you know how other people on campus live," said Jesse Marquette. "A student’s personality is seen through their rooms.

"They get to know the other people on campus," said Tim Collins. "We are responsible enough to do that. We could study with people from other dorms."

Amy Brown suggested that open dorms would serve as a place where guests who need help can go all the way to David’s Place or DeMoss Hall. Others liked the idea of open dorms, but also pointed out that there were no rules and time limits.

According to SGA President Craig Long, open dormy propositions have been brought before student government.

Stewart did say there was a possibility of extending the times for dorms. However, he also indicated that there were no plans regarding open dorms.

The spring semester Open Dorms are scheduled for sometimes in January.

If it seemed like the lines for registration were longer than usual this semester, it's probably because they were. For the first time in L.U. history, the registration rate among eligible students — excluding graduating students — was above 90 percent. According to Vice President of Admissions Jory Spencer, there is always a decline in the overall head-count — mainly due to graduation — from the fall semester to the spring semester. That decline, which is usually between 10 and 12 percent, will be cut in half because of the increased rate of registered students.

Spencer explained that the increased number of students translate into a decrease in school revenue, which will be levied this spring because of the larger percentage of registered students. Add to that the 500 expected new and transfer students coming in for the spring, and the school has a slight improvement in financial status. Spencer said that, while Liberty's main purpose is to spread God's word and develop Christians for their individual calling, "it's a business too."

The record high percentage of registered students is consistent with the trend of an increasing student body.

Stir-fry to arrive at Marriott in spring

By SARAH K. POLLAK

"Exotic meal changes are in the offing at Marriott Food Services. The cafeteria purchased six new Japanese woks to give students more variety in their dining. Beginning next semester, students will have the opportunity to make their own stir-fry."

"We want to offer more low fat food options," said Marriott Food Services Director Ernie Minor. "Marriott is getting the newness of the woks wears off, the lines should get better."

The Asian option will replace the Take-Change bar. The woks will be available for use seven days a week during lunch and dinner hours.

Students will have a choice of fresh vegetables, with a rotation of meats to compose their meals. A variety of cooking oils, such as sesame and canola, and sauces, such as teriyaki and sweet and sour, will also be made available.

"I think the opportunity to make my own stir fry is cool," said student Robin Miller. "I really like the non-stick frying pan. According to Minor, use of a counter-top rice cooker so that students will be able to make their own food."

The woks feature a new type of cooking technology called magnetic induction cooking. The heat source will come through a magnetic field under the woks. According to Minor, use of this kind of work will make creating one's own stir-fry safer and easier.

The biggest advantage to getting these woks is that it adds another food option for students," said Minor. "I think people will enjoy making their own food."

"Marriott is currently considering the purchase of a crockpot type rice cooker so that students will always have fresh rice to go with their stirring-stir-fry food creations."

Senate deals with textbooks, senior hall meeting necessity

Senator Raina Lund argued, "This is one way that we can publicly show the student body that we have their best interests in mind."

Opponents saw the bill as an infringement upon their freedom. Senator Rachel Steimer said, "I always heard that the way to get people to do something is to make it hard for them."

According to one of the bill's supporters, Clark asked, "This is a unique way to show that SGA — especially Senate — is here to help the students."
Anybody starting a red (and yet?)

Well, we are now deep in the holiday season. Turkey Day is a memory of cranberry sauce, pumpkins and errant relatives. More of a speed bump in the first round for the student. Most students have done the grocery shopping, begun a million department stores behind it, and the official commercial文化的 of the December month starts and creeps up every year. nationalistic feelings, we just wouldn't be Americans. Actually, the key thing to understand this December is the same old horizon. But since it's hard to believe that the same old thing is true, it is.

A child is a small dreamer and a dreamer is a great dreamer. That's why it's so important to make that dream come true. And that's why it's so important to make that dream come true.

SGA from four different college level texts talk about the Christmas holiday, and its impact on the SGA. It's not a stretch to say that there are at least two different SGA's working towards the same goal. The goal is to keep the SGA as vibrant as possible, while still maintaining a sense of professionalism.

In the beginning, the SGA was a group of students who were passionate about the importance of the Christmas holiday. They wanted to make sure that the holiday was celebrated in a meaningful way. The SGA had the vision to make the holiday a time of togetherness and joy, and they worked hard to make sure that it was a success.

The SGA's goal was to create a special holiday environment on campus. They organized special events and activities that celebrated the holiday spirit, and they worked hard to make sure that everyone felt included. They wanted to make sure that the holiday was celebrated in a meaningful way, and they were able to do that because of their passion and dedication.

The SGA's success is a testament to the power of dedication and hard work. They were able to create a special holiday environment on campus, and they did so because of their passion and dedication. They showed that it is possible to make a difference in the world, and they did so because of their dedication and hard work.

But to go too far with commercialization is not going to fit the season. The halls are still filled with people. The houses are still filled with the smell of Christmas. The gift giving is still going on. But to go too far with commercialization is not going to fit the season. The halls are still filled with people. Most of us have heard the story of the birthday of Jesus Christ. The story is told in the New Testament. It is a story of hope and love, and it is a story that is celebrated at Christmas.

In the end, it all boils down to this: Merry Christmas. Remember whose birthday it is?

What makes you a conservative?

By RACHEL ELIZABETH Conway Regular

The most popular word on campus has to be "liberal." In fact, 1996 was the "liberal" year. As far as I'm concerned, "liberal" has been the hot word on campus for the last 25 years. It is a word that has become synonymous with a way of life that is quite different from what we believe in. What is it that makes a person conservative? Is it about being right or wrong? Is it about being good or evil? Is it about being God's children or God's enemies? These are the questions that I would like to explore in this essay.

Conservatives believe that the individual is good, not perfect. People who believe in the Bible believe that the individual is inherently good, not perfect, but capable of doing better. They believe that the Bible is the ultimate authority, not the government. Conservatives believe that the individual is responsible for his or her own actions, not the government. They believe that the individual is responsible for his or her own salvation, not the government. Conservatives believe that the individual is responsible for his or her own destiny, not the government.

A home for the holiday

I have yet to be home for Thanksgivings up until this year, so this year was an exception.

Only the second since I was a child at the Champion office, knowing that my parents are light sleepers. I have been up since the Christmas season originated in England, in 1813, illustrated John Cakove in the Christmas card text. It was supposed to be a postcard, and mail "A Merry Christmas to You." Only 1,000 of these original Christmas cards were sold, but it didn't take long for them to become the Christmas card.

The tradition of exchanging Christmas cards in England had spread throughout Britain by 1860 and became popular in the late 1800s. The tradition has become a big business in the United States with card companies producing Christmas greetings in every shape, size and color imaginable.

There are semi-annual (little battery lends), some decorated with placards, glitter, and other items that pay out when opened and some with glowing, right light outlet. Some can be sent through e-mail, and others contain mini tape recorders so that the3 sender can record their holiday message.

Libby's number 1 fan. When I first came to school three years ago today, we were given credit for their sacrifices and awards. They were the Saints — older in body, young at heart, a Spiritual Life Director or a prayer leader. Everyone knew about RAs. They've served on the hall in the last year as a result of her experiences. As a prayer leader, I pray for the girls in my group everyday and talk with them on one to one make sure they are doing okay, said Tracy Jasper. This is Jasper's first year as a prayer leader. The girls in my group are very close to me, and they encourage me to. As their prayer leader, I want them to know that I'm there for them if they need anything.

Elders: He keeps going and going ... Seventy-year-old equipment man still getting it done after all these years

By JOSHD HOWE
Champion Reporter

Elders said some reporters who have visited the Liberty University Student Activities Center have been surprised by Elders' energy level and determination. "I do plan to retire — when the capture comes," Elders said.

"We've had freshmen here... when they try to keep up with him, they can't," Liberty Assistant Football Manager Tim Wits said.

In 1989, Elders finished a 15-year career of driving across the country for the Liberty University maintenance department. But at 63, an age in which many people retire, Elders caught his second wind. He accepted an invitation from Liberty Head Football Coach Sam Rutigliano to try to keep up with him, they can't," Wits said. But at 63, an age in which many people retire, Elders caught his second wind. He accepted an invitation from Liberty Head Football Coach Sam Rutigliano to be the head equipment manager for Liberty football.

Six years later, Elders is still going strong. "It's a real motivation," Elders said. "Knowing nothing about it to begin with, the challenge that it has posed business. It is not uncommon for Elders to put in 10 hours a week to keep up with the necessary tasks. He is quick to point out where the results have come from. "Everyday ... the managers and I have time together in prayer. That has been the thing that has kept us going more than anything else," Elders said.

Aside from Elders' strong commitment to faith, work, and well-being, he also has a sense of humor. "Charlie's great," Wits said. "You have to work to keep him busy. It's just too fun to work with him." Those who work with Elders know about that. He pulls practical jokes regularly. Earlier this Fall, Elders tried to run two girls off the sidewalk with his equipment cart.

Since Elders is having this much fun working, he will keep on until he has to. "I do plan to retire," Elders said. "But I'm going to do it when I want to," he said. "When the capture comes."

L.J. leads way over Howard

Junior guard leads way as five Flames score in double-digits as the Flames corralled 70 Saturday night at the Vines Center. L.J. scored 30 points lead for most of the second half and missed Howard's cut for most of the game.

By RICH MACLONE

Junior shooting guard L.J. Jackson and five other Flames made double-digits in points as the Flames completed the Trios of Howard University-McMurry-Howard Saturday night at the Vines Center (LJ) scored a triple double point lead for most of the second half and ended Howard's cut for most of the game. The Flames were led by L.J. Jackson with 30 points.

The Flames placed four players in double-digits as the Flames corralled 70 Saturday night at the Vines Center. L.J. scored 30 points lead for most of the second half and missed Howard's cut for most of the game.

L.J. Jackson is taking charge of the Flames offense this season. He has been averaging double-digits in points and has been a key player in the Flames' success.

Said L.J. Jackson, "I just wanted to get the ball in my hands and make some plays. I knew I had to step up and make some shots."

The Flames are currently 12-1 and are looking to continue their hot start to the season.
