New club hopes to promote environmental awareness

By CURT W. OLSON

The newest club, organizing on campus, Friends of the Earth, is hoping to inform Liberty University students of the importance of environmental issues in the United States and the world. While Liberty University is a modern day environmentalist, probably he believes the Greenpeace organization and other groups which are considered radical because they favor nuclear power plants and military operations.

What will be the goals of Friends of the Earth?

"We have five goals," Perrone said, "which we want to implement. First, we want to inform students of the critical environmental issues which are occurring in the world today. Second, we want to educate the students about those issues in a way that can be easily understood and involve them in solutions. Third, we want to organize on campus a number of projects to help protect the environment in which we live. Fourth, we want to do something about the pollution which exists. Fifth, facilitate action whenever possible."

When asked what he is aiming for, Perrone said, "At least 200 members at the beginning of the school year, with the goal of increasing that number by the end of the year."

Fellow group members are working on five goals for the club, "Friends of the Earth". The club is part of a national organization with comparable clubs at schools around the country.

The club will have upcoming events which will be advertised in the Liberty Press. The first event was "Club Sunday evening." The event was held at the Flames' Ad

Residence Life office observes Date, Acquaintance Rape Awareness Week

By MEGAN BEARDER

One of the most active college-age women in the nation is rape or acquaintance rape. In recent years, a survey of 5,000 college women revealed that 60% of those surveyed indicated that they had been raped or had almost been raped in the past. Women are more likely to be raped than men, and yet many women do not report their experiences to authorities. The statistics are alarming, and it is important to raise awareness about rape prevention strategies and how to help survivors.

The Residence Life office at Liberty University is observing Date/Acquaintance Rape Awareness Week, with a series of events to raise awareness about rape and its impact on survivors. The events will include workshops, discussions, and awareness-raising activities. The goal of these events is to provide a supportive and safe environment for survivors to share their stories and learn strategies for preventing and responding to rape. The events will be held from Feb. 14 to Feb. 17, and are open to all students and faculty.

For more information about the events, or to access resources for survivors of rape, please visit the Residence Life office website or contact the Residential Life Office at 434-581-2222.

LACT sponsors Teacher Recruitment Day Club Sunday evening.

Senator Bentsen's Office is sponsoring an event that will bring together educators, survivors, and policymakers to discuss ways to prevent and respond to acquaintance rape on college campuses. The event, "Rethinking Rape in College," will be held on campus on Feb. 15 and will feature speakers and panels discussing the latest research on acquaintance rape and strategies for preventing it. The event is free and open to the public.

President Bentsen recently signed a bill into law that provides for increased funding and support for programs that address acquaintance rape on college campuses. The bill, known as the "Acquaintance Rape Prevention Act," provides for the establishment of a national center for the study and prevention of acquaintance rape, and for the development of educational programs and resources to help prevent and respond to acquaintance rape on college campuses. The bill was supported by a bipartisan coalition of lawmakers and is a significant step forward in addressing this issue.

The Senate's successful action on this bill is an important victory for survivors of acquaintance rape and for educators who are committed to creating safer campus environments for all students. The event celebrates this achievement and seeks to build on the momentum created by the bill's passage. It is an opportunity for survivors, educators, and policymakers to come together and discuss how we can work together to prevent and respond to acquaintance rape on college campuses.
Christians should practice environmental stewardship

Remember the "Trash It" campaign from last semester? You know, the contest sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi that had prizewinners submit letters to the editor on any subject pertaining to the environment and the prize was an open container of alcohol for a specified amount of time? Remember who the winner was? That's right, no winner. It was announced in fact, the entire contest was scrapped after a couple of weeks because participation was so low that the contest might as well have never been started.

Think back on just exactly what Kappa Delta Pi was and where they were trying to get with the contest. First of all, there was the campus of litter and other trash. In other words, we were to pick up after ourselves (or others) and show some pride in the campus with which God has blessed us. Was this an outrageous request? Should we have to sponsor a contest in order to convince ourselves into keeping the campus clean?

Environmentalism is quickly becoming one of today's "hot topics." A quick check will reveal that people from all backgrounds and walks of life are taking a stand to protect the environment.

In an attempt to raise the awareness of the need for the health of the earth April 22 by participating in Earth Day 1990, a group of environmentalists from about 20 years ago started the first Earth Day, April 22, 1970, was instrumental in convincing the federal government to establish the Environmental Protection Agency. The EPA has given birth to the modern environmental movement. Demands such as Earth Day and environmental groups like Green Peace have gained increasing popular pressure to have as people have become more concerned about such global issues as acid rain, destruction of the Amazon rainforests and the destruction of the protective ozone layer which has escaped the now-called Greenhouse Effect. One particular group that has finally jumped on the environmental bandwagon is popular music performers. Many artists now devote their music and time to the cause of environmentalism in an attempt to raise the planet from ecological destruction. Charles Alexander recalled a recent interview he did with an environmentalist. "When I was growing up I never knew anyone who truly cared about the earth, but now I see that each year is an earth- related crusade. We're not wise we're you become just another statistic.

Spring break can be a joyous vacation for all involved. Unfortunately, the spring breakers are not always as fortunate as those who have joined the crusade to save the rain forests and the depletion of the protective ozone layer which has escaped the now-called Greenhouse Effect. Alas, as Christians, we should be greatly concerned with protecting the purity of the Creation, for the greatest potential damage is the damage that could be done to your loved ones if they were to be exposed to the wrong environment! In other words, it's heaven.

Creation Studies remains education requirement

By DAWN E. WALKER

Creation Studies remains a requirement at Liberty University, according to information about the bond issue.

"I don't want to take my head to the floor on the bond issue," said Dr. Dennis Fields, vice president of administrative relations, because of the expected changes in the curriculum due to faculty retirements.

"I know there has been some confusion, but Creation Studies is still required. There are no changes to the present curriculum," he said.

Dr. James Hall, Creation Studies professor, believes that many of the rumors circulating are the result of a revision of general education course taking place.

The administration is looking to reserve the general education courses that are not required to be taken at Liberty.

Government seminar to attract 15 colleges

By BRETT B. MANLEY

Liberty University will host the Federal Government Seminar Day April 4.

Students from 15 different colleges and universities will meet at David's Place from 8 a.m. to noon.

The Office of Personnel Management (OPM) will be giving the seminar.

Topics to be discussed include spending and the application to law school and drug testing.

The Career Center for Career Planning and Placement is strongly recommending the seminar to all those interested in a future job with the government regardless of major or classification.

Jo-Ann Howe, Liberty's job placement coordinator, said, "In the next 10 years the government will retire approximately 40 percent of its employees."

The OPM has not been on college campuses in the last 10 years and is the first seminar of its kind ever held at Liberty.

Class size cancels 1990 baccalaureate

Barlett convenience services will not be held for the graduating class of 1990, the first time in 20 years when a student's name has been canceled.

"The class size this year is not the same," said Kenneth Frohman, administrative assistant to Dr. A. Pierre Guillermin, explained. "We just cannot fit that many parents, friends and graduates in the Multi- Purpose Center."

However, the President's consent and inclusion will still be held on Thursday, May 10, 1990, starting at 7 p.m. Both the consent and inclusion will be held in the Multi Purpose Center.

Another change for the class of 1990 is that seniors will be given final exams at the same time as the other students. In the past seniors have taken finals earlier in the semester. Dr. Earl Mills, provost of Liberty University, said the change was made to help prevent conflicts between students, instructors and students. "It protects our rights to know what's going on," she said.

The next senior evening is Thursday, Feb. 15, at 7 p.m. in DH 101. Students are encouraged to attend.

In a performance that dashed head coach Don Shuler's hopes for an open, the Liberty University wrestling team fell 24-13 in a road dual meet against George Mason.

"It was a good challenge," Shuler said of the match, though expressing disappointment that the final point gained did not indicate the level of effort expended by the Flames. "The guys worked really hard on this one," he said.

From the outset the Flames showed improvement in an initial six-point duel. Fall victory by outstanding sophomore, however, proved one more of LU's positive points.

Providing a future for the next generation

Aluminum recycling is now made convenient for consumers by the use of a trailer parked at convenient, high-traffic locations with a regular, well-publicized schedule.

About 200 million aluminum beverage cans are used every day—or almost one per day per person in the United States. Through 1987 Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company has recycled the equivalent of about 86 billion cans, or more than three billion pounds of aluminum, paying consumers almost $900 million for their return.

Aluminum recycling is now made convenient for consumers by the use of a trailer parked at convenient, high-traffic locations with a regular, well-publicized schedule.

Shredded aluminum cans arrive by rail at a Reynolds reclamation plant and are off-loaded before being fed into a furnace for melting.

Shreds of aluminum are charged into a melting furnace at a Reynolds reclamation plant as a quality control technician oversees the operation.

The molten aluminum is gradually hardened into ingot form. This 30,000-pound ingot will be made into about 750,000 new aluminum beverage cans.

Once the aluminum is melted, it flows from the furnace into these crucibles, from which it is transformed either to ingot casting operations or other fabricating process plants.

Recycled aluminum cans shredded into chips become shiny new beverage containers through the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling process, giving Highway Users League a steady supply of consumer-ready containers within as little as six weeks.
