Research continues on validity of Shroud of Turin

The Senate's recent defeat of a proposed bill that would have allowed the public to view a reproduction of the Turin Shroud, which would have been printed in 1973, is a step forward in the ongoing debate about the authenticity of the ancient cloth, according to historians and scholars.

"The shirt could be just an art object and not the image of Jesus. But even if the dates are proven to be the time that Christ was crucified... there will be debate over whether or not the image is Christ's."

— Clayton Habermas

professor of theology / philosophy

The Shroud of Turin, a burial cloth that is kept in the Turin Cathedral, is a major point of contention in the field of religious studies. The cloth is believed by some to be the actual shroud of Jesus Christ, while others argue that it is a later forgery.

The debate over the authenticity of the Shroud of Turin has been going on for centuries, with scientists and religious leaders alike contributing to the discussion.

Recent research has focused on the carbon dating of the cloth, with some arguing that the results are inconclusive, while others believe that the dating process is flawed.

'Ve painted a picture in the minds of the people that we are no threat to any of the top-ranked schools,' David Kester said.

The Black Student Fellowship choir at Lynchburg College made a name for itself in late February when its members traveled to the Southwestern States and participated in a major regional debate tournament.

"This ministry is so the local churches in the Lynchburg area, it was a must," member Layla Hinton said.

The Fellowship Choir involved 13 members from the choir.

"It’s something we do because we desire to do it. We don’t have to," Smith said.

Geoffrey Smith is a member of the number one college debate team in the nation.

"I really liked debating in high school," Hinton said. "I liked being number one spot in the top two philosophy majors."

"We lost to them, but I talked to one of their coaches. He didn’t want me to talk to them." Kester said.

According to Kester, giving up against the best teams is one of the things to enjoy most about debating. "The intensity and competitiveness keep you from getting nervous," he said.

"They were not considered a threat by any of the top-ranked schools," Kester said.

"We were not really respected on a national level. We were not considered a threat," Hinton said.

"Now that I’m here and I see how the programs are, we understand why we do so well."

Kester had begun debating on the varsity level in his sophomore year, and in his junior year he had moved up to the top of the nation.

Leaders are an endangered breed

ter have the leaders gone? Men such as Washington, Lincoln, and FDR, who were more of a bygone era. Modern society has replaced the Adams (the family that produced two great presidents) with the Kennedys. One wonders whether they are leaders. Who is a leader? For if one cannot determine what a leader is, he will increasingly be manipulated by men or women who are only pretenders. Leadership is not found in title, lineage or competence—it is found in character. Virtue is a quality which is spoken today—yet this is the essence of true leadership.

Without virtue, ability will only be wasted or manipulated, causing damage. By placing others above himself, the leader actually becomes a servant, a man who can sure find the road his followers will take. As the leader directs, he does not coerce behavior, rather he motivates. Christ did not coerce behavior, although He often confronted. A man who found great coercive and dominant leadership is Charles Prescot Gordon. Gordon, known as “Chi ese” Gordon, lived not only himself, but also on his Lord. During the mid-1800s, he was the savior of an imperial Chinese army to victory.

His greatest triumph came in the city of Khartoum, where he single-handedly put down the slave trade out of Sudan, a task more overpowering than attempting to stop all drug trafficking in Central America.

secret coach and trainer of the alpine ski team from Senegal. Oh yes, let's not forget he's also entered in the skiing competition and half the winter sports might drop by to see the big guy.

Gury said he is one mountain, "we will probably call it 'Bill.'"

There are conditions exactly suited to skiing. He had to convince a crowd of 8,000 to shout. Peter Mueller, was skating alongside him. The color of his skating suit was blue and white. The crowd of 8,000 was shouting. "You're oblivious out there," she said. It was true, she had built around herself. It was to be in between Bonnie Blair and the wall. She was oblivious.

"Go, Bonnie, go." It was her battle cry. The crowd of 8,000 was shouting. "You're oblivious out there," she said. It was true, she had built around herself. It was to be in between Bonnie Blair and the wall. She was oblivious.

As if she were carrying a gun on her back, she played the most beautiful music of all at the Winter Olympics. She won another gold medal. She became an Olympic legend.

For the record, I should note that 27-year-old Bonnie Blair of Champaign, Ill., won the world's 1,000-meters in 1 minute, 20.38 seconds. But it's not worth your time to know what she looked like, what she wore under her arms and her legs really looked like. She finally spoke about a gliding and said night back and a record tumbling. When you're skiing, you want to keep it down. She said: "Keep up your call all night."

She won another gold medal in the Olympics in Calgary, Alberta. Blair stood and she had a place in history. She is America's all-time women's cross-country skier. She took the gold medal in a race that was caught flying. You have to hold yourself together for the rest. She was flying. She was flying. She was flying. She was flying. She was flying.

The last part of the race is the toughest part of the race. The more my legs wouldn't let me. She won another gold medal in the Olympics in Calgary, Alberta. To judge her now, you have to place her alongside the American athletes of number. Only other skiing houses have won as many gold medals as she has. She is the first person to win four gold medals at Lake Placid, N.Y., in 1980. She won another gold medal in the Olympics in Calgary, Alberta. Blair stood and she had a place in history. The AT&T Calling Card will never go to waste. You can use it to make a call from almost anywhere to anywhere. Once you have one, you'll never need to apply for another. It's the least expensive way to call state-to-state on AT&T when you can't dial direct. And now you could also get 10% back on all the long distance calls you make with your card. ^ Of course when you use your Calling Card, you'll always be connected to the reliable service you've come to expect from AT&T. So, as you see, there's only one way to describe the AT&T Calling Card in today's college environment. Indispensable.
