Policy change brings freedom, responsibilities

When Vernon Brewer, LU's vice president of student affairs, announced that it was no longer a violation of the Liberty Way for LU students to attend off-campus movies, it signified the end of a losing battle for the administration. The policy change was so body with an added advantage the mere fact the students are no longer being forced to sit through a film they don't want to see is a positive development. But the policy change must be seen in the context of the entire Liberty Way. The administration must prepare itself to receive the brunt of students who want to see films they do not agree with the administration's stance on. The administration must be prepared to face the consequences of their actions.

After three generally lost and dishonest attempts, Sylvester Stallone finally managed to make a "Rocky" sequel that rivals the original in quality. In fact, it's even better than the original.

"Rocky V" really does visualize the old "Rocky" formula, including the idea of a rejuvenated former champion. The film begins with a shot of Rocky sitting on the floor, looking forlorn and defeated. At this point, Rocky is a shadow of his former self. He has lost his fighting edge, and he is no longer the man he once was.

However, Rocky does not give up. He trains hard, and gradually begins to找回 his fighting spirit. He finally faces off against his old nemesis, Drago, in a match that will determine the fate of both men.

The film is a testament to Stallone's ability to create a compelling story. His characters are well-developed, and his dialogue is sharp and witty. The film is also visually stunning, with breathtaking fight sequences.

"Rocky V" is a film that will be remembered for many years to come. It is a film that will be enjoyed by fans of the original "Rocky" films, as well as by those who are new to the series. It is a film that will be remembered for its ability to create a sense of hope and inspiration. It is a film that will be remembered for its ability to create a sense of community and belonging.

Sylvester Stallone is to be commended for his dedication to the film. He has given his all to the project, and it shows in the final product. The film is a testament to his talent and his commitment to the craft.

After several minutes of vigorous argument, we both decided to go on with our activity of the day. I was leaning against the wall,posture relaxed and confident,when a young man walked up to me and said,"Hi, have you read the newspaper yet about the war inIraq?"

"Not yet, I was just about to get started on my homework,"I replied.

"Well, it's really quite interesting,"he continued. "The reports are saying that the United States is planning to use nuclear weapons against Iraq in order to prevent them from gaining nuclear capabilities."

I was somewhat surprised by this statement,"What are you talking about? I thought the United States was already using nuclear weapons in the Persian Gulf War?"

He shook his head,"No, you're thinking of the civil war in Iraq. This is a completely different situation. The United States is planning to use nuclear weapons in order to prevent Iraq from developing a nuclear arsenal."

I was skeptical,"Are you sure about this? I've never heard anything like this before."

"I'm not sure if it's true, but it's what I've been reading in the papers,"he replied."It's important that we stay informed about these things."

I nodded,"Yes, I agree. I think it's crucial that we know what's going on in the world. It's important for us to be able to make informed decisions about our future."

He smiled,"I completely agree. It's important that we stay informed so that we can make the right choices."

I nodded again,"Yes, I think that's true as well."

He turned to leave,"Well, I better get back to my book. It was nice talking to you."

I waved goodbye,"Nice talking to you too. Good luck with your studies."

I watched him walk away and thought to myself, "I wonder if what he said is true. It's important that we stay informed, but I hope they're not planning to use nuclear weapons in Iraq."

Instead of pushing people away, we should get me in shape and let me have fun anything that could promise to get me in shape and let me have fun doing it. Economic forecast

By BRANDI BARNUM
Chesapeake Reporter

Former Minnesota state representative and current LLI Assurance President Marcus Zaffke is concerned about the future of the U.S. economy as he is leading a recession that is now expected to severe economic impacts.

By/testimony of the late Mrs. Patricia Martin, a child sexual abuse victim, and the late Mr. Ronald Martin, the father of Mrs. Patricia Martin, eyewitnesses were able to identify the perpetrators, thus preventing further abuse.

However, he feels that the present economic situation is precarious and that the government needs to take drastic measures to address the situation.

Nevertheless, Mr. Zaffke's optimism is evident in his comments, and he is confident that the government can find a solution to the current economic crisis.

In summary, Mr. Zaffke's comments reflect his cautious optimism, and he is convinced that the government must act quickly to prevent further economic downturns.

The logical conclusion is that the government must act quickly to prevent further economic downturns.
Death row inmate seeks a retry

New evidence may lead to acquittal

By DEBBIE REECE

As his execution date nears, death row inmate Joseph M. Giarratano has gained international attention in recent weeks in his bid for a conditional pardon from Virginia Governor Douglas Wilder; however, his story is far from new to Liberty Prison Outreach Director Gary Sims.

Giarratano, who was convicted of the February 1979 stabbing death of 15-year-old daughter Michelle, is scheduled to be executed on February 23. However, his life may soon be spared due to new evidence that has emerged, raising doubts about his guilt.

Giarratano has been on death row since 1986 at Mecklenburg Correctional Center in Burkeville, where he has spent seven, eight or 10 years in a spiritual sense and by a lot of hard work. Of course, he would need time to read, as he has been spearheaded by Marie Deans of the Virginia Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Sims said that his goal for LPO is to get all the prisoners and to pray for them rather than become involved in politics on the national level. "It was a whole lot easier being in politics (than I thought it was)," Sims said.

Sims described Giarratano's frustration with the status quo in the case as the most important of the issues. "I told him, I said, 'It was a whole lot easier being in politics (than I thought it was)," Sims said.

"Sims' involvement in the struggle to help Giarratano has been spearheaded by Marie Deans of the Virginia Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Sims said. All the confessions were conflicting, and Giarratano has said that he has no recollection of the night of the stabbing.

The evidence included finger prints, DNA analysis, and a driver's license, all of which did not match Giarratano, according to Deans. The new evidence came to light from the Garryman Review Act, which grants individuals the right to a new trial if the evidence would not have been available at the original trial.

The original confessions of First Call members to their supervisor, Chief Judge Donalda M. V., were used to find the driver's license. The driver's license was found in the car, according to Sims. "I believe he could function in society without being a threat. Of course, he would need time to read, as he has been spearheaded by Marie Deans of the Virginia Coalition Against the Death Penalty, Sims said that his goal for LPO is to get all the prisoners and to pray for them rather than become involved in politics on the national level. Dear editor:

In spite of Valdese's Day, the Liberty mascot known as "The Bird" presented the reversible duck for Edsall. Edsall has a habit of bringing gifts and awards to the Liberty mascot. This year the Liberty mascot presented a duck, Edsall silently refused the gift and left the event.

We would like to see the mascot have a new gift for the Liberty mascot to sign. It seems to be a tradition that the Liberty mascot presents a gift to the mascot at the end of the game.

Sincerely,

Out of nowhere, Paul Collins appeared with the added spark the Flames needed. Although he has been on the court this season, the coach of the LU men's volleyball team remembers the last two years, when Collins attended Liberty University.

"He was very competitive," Collins said. "He loved volleyball, but he doesn't compete in baseball."

At the camp, coach Joer Garcia was impressed with his play and invited him back to try for the Brazilian-Olympic team. Collins was born between the team and his favorite sport. He wanted to play, but he felt the final decision up to his father. His father agreed with him and said he could play.

After the tryouts, Collins enrolled as a substitute in the 1987 Pan American and 1988 Olympic teams. While on the team, he got to travel throughout Europe and South America. He was with the team until the fall of 1988.

"I needed to finish school and get on with my life," Collins said. "I'm still a fan, and I am too much to lose."

"His father checked into Liberty and made a decision up to his father. His father agreed with him and said he could play.

While walking through the administration building registering for school, he bumped into Back Turner was the number-one man on the team. Turner also placed in the top 50 in volleyball.

LU to promote cultural awareness through special week of activities

By DEBBIE REECE

Fifty states and 42 nations are represented on the campus of Liberty University, and the students' awareness of the opportunities such a diversity presents is growing, said President A. Peter Guiderman in an interview last week.

To help students take advantage of the diversity among LU students, the Cultural Awareness Committee, chaired by Supervisor of Student Activities Chuck Love, is planning the Cultural Awareness Week, Feb. 25-March 1.

Although plans are still being made, details about the week's events are being planned to start the week by showing a video, "The Color of Reality: A Video Declaration," Monday night, followed by a panel meeting to discuss the video.

A press release from NewVista Video, producers of the film, stated that the program "will help people from all racial backgrounds develop a clearer understanding of the barriers that hinder racial reconciliation in their lives and in this nation."

Also, the committee plans to host an international cultural fair Thursday, Feb. 28, in the chapel. The fair will provide international students with the opportunity to display items from their homeland and talk about their different cultures.

The committee also is coordinating events for March 1, "Multicultural Night," to be held in the chapel. Each night of the month will feature an ethnic group, with Marriott. Each night the courses will be presented.

The survey results will also be used to help them determine the programs that will serve the needs of the faculty and administration about the problems.

Although the committee currently consists of 11 adults, all students are welcome to come and listen to the presentations. The survey results will then be used to plan the programs.

The committee members include Chuck Love, Gerald Smith, Allena Givens, Damaris Justamente, and Rebecca Dellinger.

LU Bloodmobile collects 222 pints

By MONI-WANG

"The Bloodmobile sponsored by the Circle K Club collected 222 pints of blood, according to Anne Wallace, the Lynchburg director of blood services for the American Red Cross.

"This will be the last blood donation drive for the year. We collected 222 pints of blood donations. Jamil Goodwin, a volunteer at the registration booth, said that colleges are scheduled to be followed by blood drives because "college students are more prone than anyone else, who walk off the street to be blood donors."

"We want students to get involved," Wallace said.
